NEGUS SEEKS JUNCTION BETWEEN TWO MAIN ETHIOPIAN ARMIES

RE-DISTRIBUTION OF RAW MATERIALS

ECHOES OF HOUSE OF COMMONS DEBATE

HOSTILE CRITICISM VOICED IN PARIS

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.

The questions of the re-distribution of the world's raw materials, which have been raised in the House of Commons, are attracting widespread attention here and are giving rise to much hostile criticism, especially in the Nationalist Press. Thus the newspaper "Ordre" declares that the re-distribution of raw materials would be tantamount to a re-distribution of colonies, and that it would be impossible to separate the economic and political aspects of this problem.

The paper, which for this reason rejects the whole scheme, goes on to say that Britain remains for the time being the principal owner of the world's supply of raw materials, and since she is also mistress of the seas she is alone in a position to carry out an effective blockade.

M. Herriot's organ, the Ere Nouvelle, takes the view that a just re-distribution of raw materials or colonies would have to take account of the requirements of all the nations as well as of their importance, and since this, according to the paper, is impracticable, there could be no question of any such re-distribution.—Trans-Ocean Service.

ENGLAND TO THE CAPE

FL.-LT. ROSE GOING STRONG

Kisumu, Yesterday.

Flight-Lieutenant Tommy Rose, who left Lympne on an attempt to break the England to the Cape record set up by Mrs. Amy Mollison at 12.25 a.m. last Thursday, arrived here at 8 a.m. to-day and resumed his flight at 9.25 a.m. local time to-day.—Reuter.

Flight-Lieutenant Rose has thus arrived at the fourth of his pre-arranged stops, which were to be Malta, Cairo, Khartum, Kisumu and Salisbury. Kisumu is a port in Kenya Colony, East Africa, at the terminus of the Uganda River. It is situated at the east end of the Kavirondo Gulf of the Victoria Nyanza, 584 miles from Mombasa. It is the principal port on the lake and is also a stage on the regular airway to the Cape.

A NARROW ESCAPE

London: Flight-Lieutenant Rose, who is attempting to beat Mrs. Mollison's record of 4 days 6 hours and 50 minutes for the flight from England to Cape Town, left Kisumu, Kenya, to-day on the next stage of his flight at 9.25 a.m. local time.

"PLAYING WITH FIRE"

Japanese Promenade With Machine-Guns

Moscow, Yesterday.

"We have to keep the whole army on the Manchurian frontier in order to prevent promiscuous incursions into Soviet territory by Japanese tourists with machine-guns," says the Isvestia, referring to the recent frontier incidents. It adds that no expeditions to Manchurian territory are being organized on Soviet territory.

The article utters the warning that anyone violating the peace of the Far East is playing with fire.—Reuter.

THE DUCE SPEAKS

Rome: A trenchant phrase regarding colonies was made by the Duce in an interview with a German press representative to-day. Signor Mussolini stated: "There are nations that have everything, and we have none. They maintain their status quo and if anyone tries to upset them, they meet with an united front." This recalls part of Dr. Goebbels' recent speech, in which he said: "We are a poor nation and the rest of the world is rolling in wealth." —Reuter's Bulletin Service.

LANDSLIDE IN FRANCE

VILLAGE ALMOST DESTROYED

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.

The landslide which has been going on uninterruptedly for the past few days near Villiers, in the vicinity of Grenoble, almost completely destroyed the village of Batle Denfont.

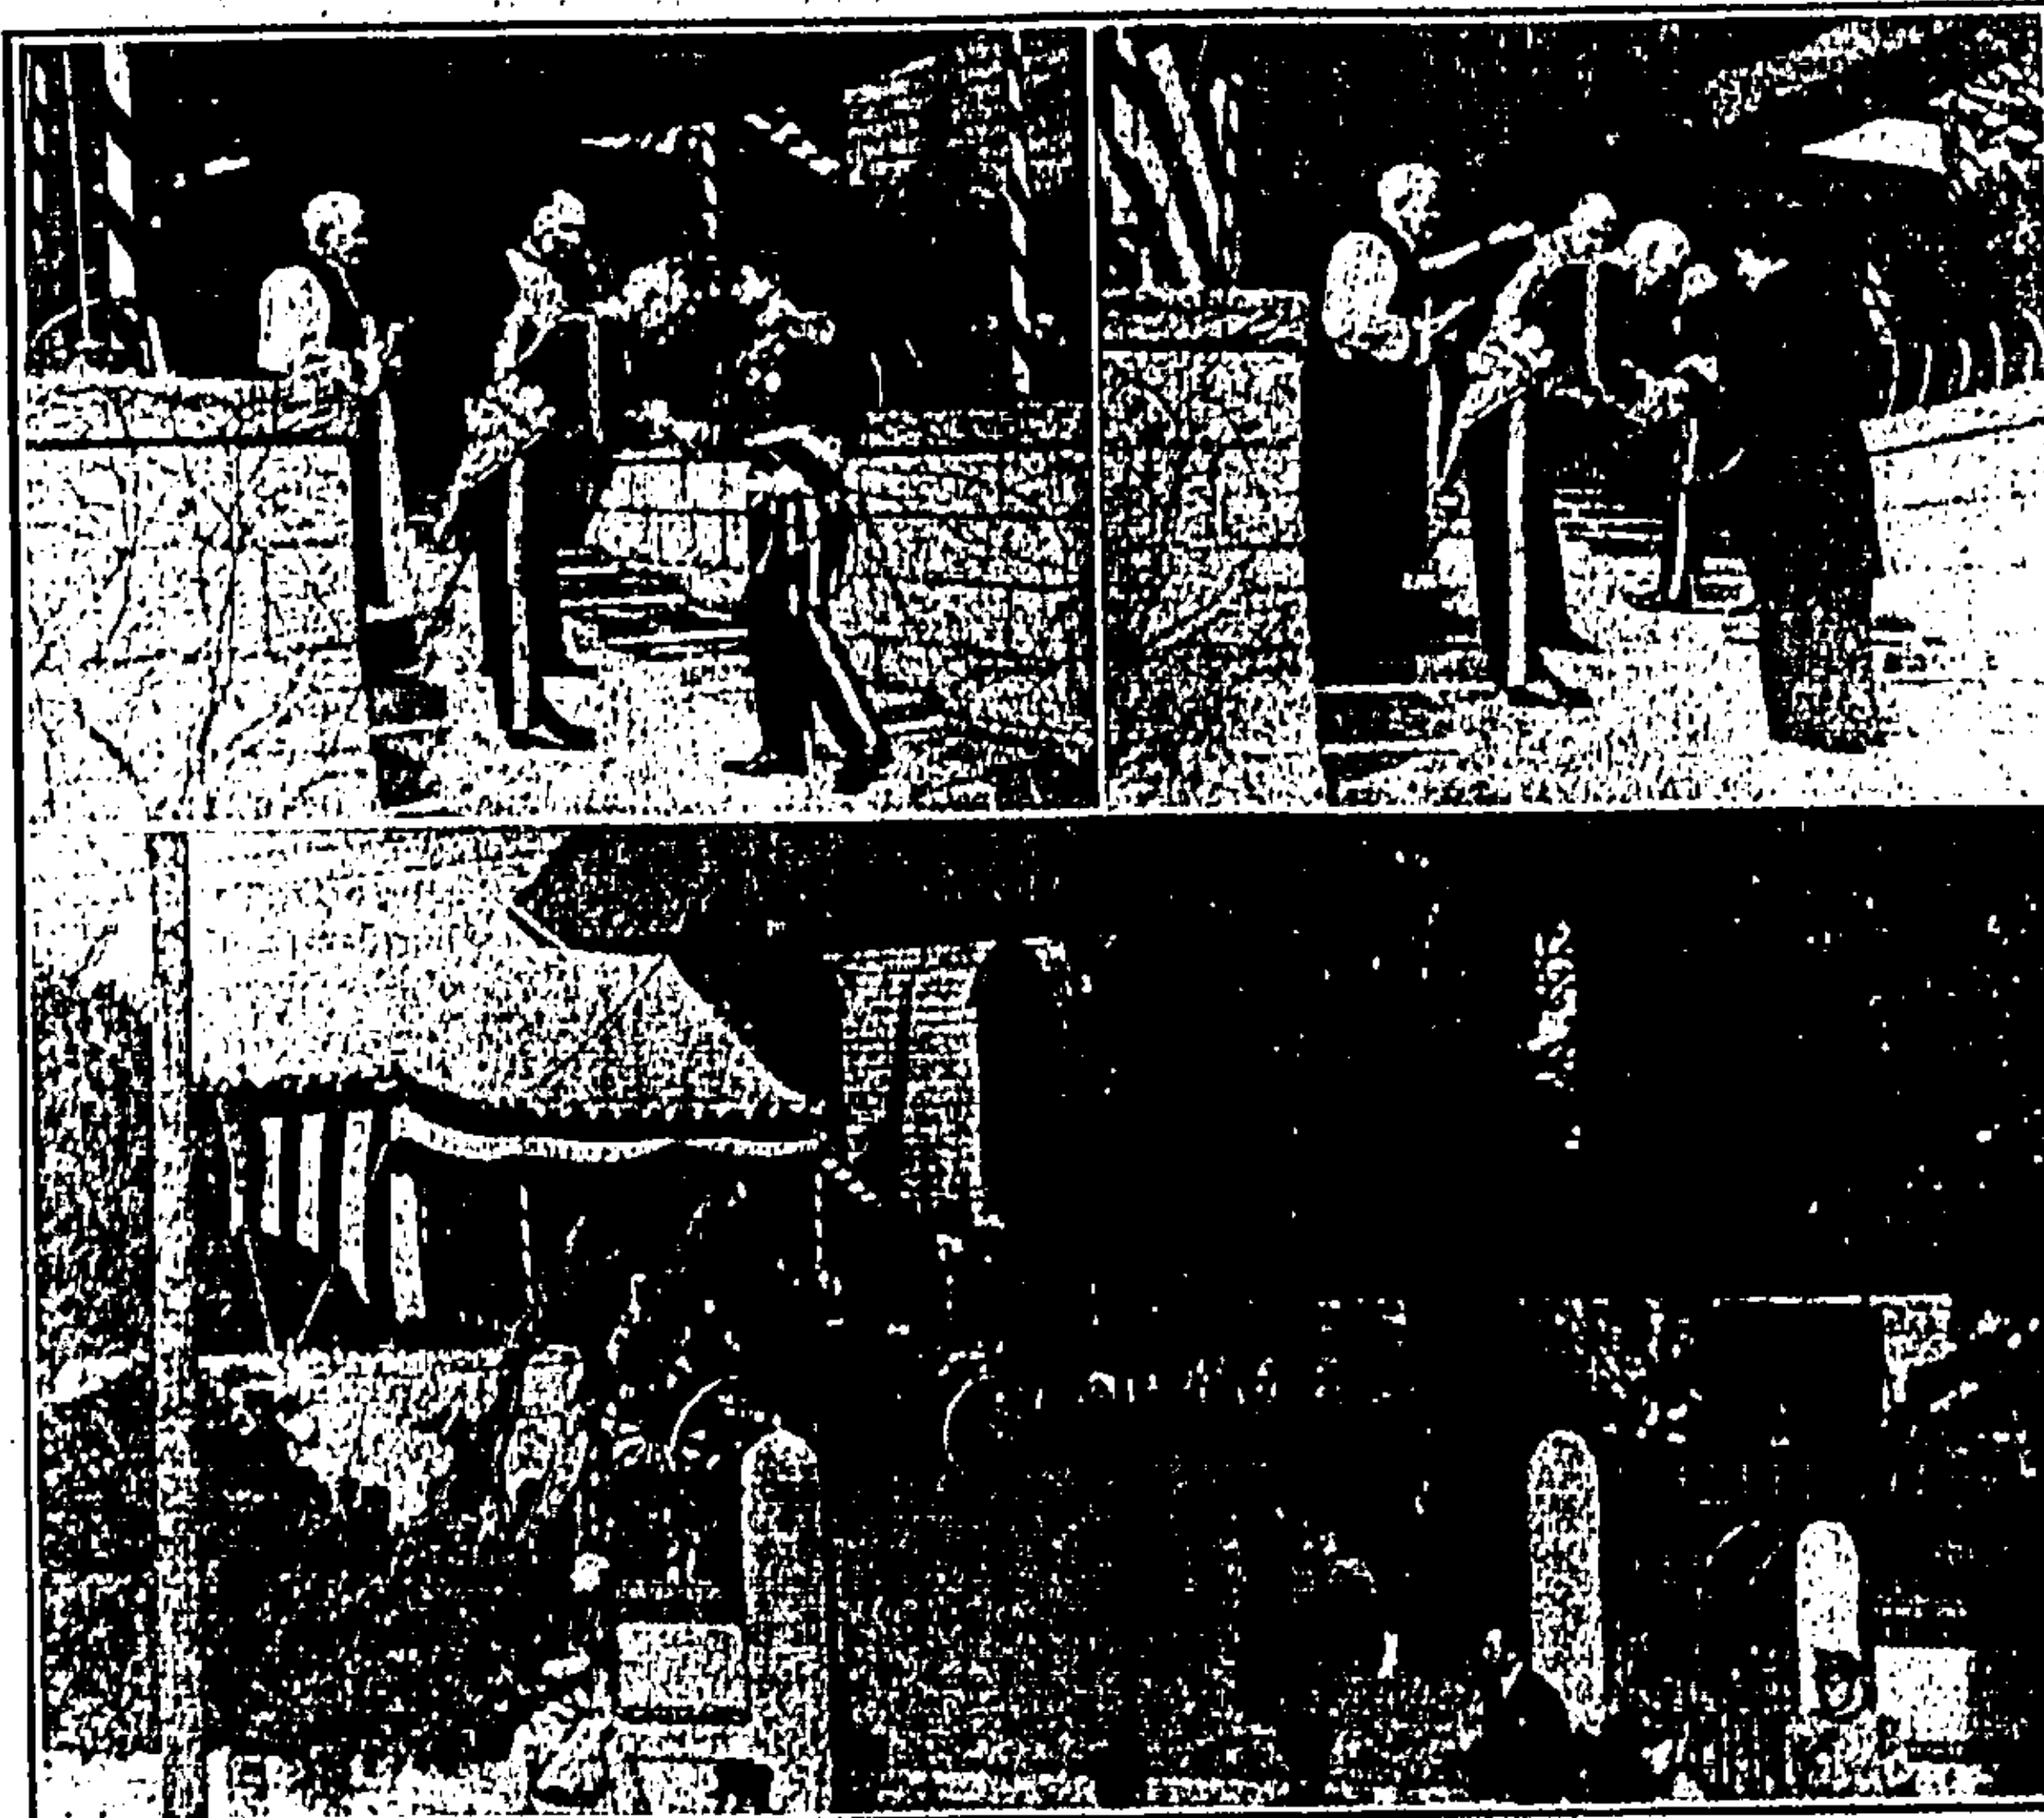

The tremendous masses of earth slowly but surely approached the banks of the river near the city, tearing down all but two of the 15 buildings. The evacuation of the village is extremely difficult, as the sole exit is completely blocked by masses of earth. —Trans-Ocean Service.

TORNADO IN ASIA MINOR

Hundreds Rendered Homeless

London, Yesterday.

A tornado followed by torrential rains struck the coast and parts of Asia Minor to-day. The lakes and rivers are swollen and six villages are submerged. The casualties are not yet known, but hundreds of people have been rendered homeless.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

Top, left: Prince Takamatsu, representing His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, arriving at St. Andrew's Church, Shiba, Tokyo, for the memorial service to His late Majesty King George V on January 28 last. Greeting the Prince are the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Clive (centre), the Canadian Minister, Sir Herbert Marler, and (left) the Rt. Rev. Samuel Henslett, D. D., Bishop of South Tokyo. Top, right: Princess Takamatsu, representing Her Majesty the Empress, being received at the church by Sir Robert Clive. Below: An exterior view of St. Andrew's Church, Tokyo, with Prince Takamatsu's carriage at the main door.

ICELAND HAS SOME

Inflicted With A "Depression"

London, Yesterday.

Iceland, which is famous for the depressions it has given to the world, is having some of them herself, as the weather there is the coldest for 20 years, with the temperature at 30 degrees below freezing point. If the weather continues in this state for some time longer it is feared that there will be a shortage of fodder for cattle.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

INNOVATION FOR SPEAKERS

"Stop—Caution—Go" Lights

London, Yesterday.

An innovation in speech-making was adopted by the British Legion at one of its functions yesterday. The innovation followed a system of traffic lights, and at the beginning of the speech a green light was put on. Thirty seconds before the time to end the speech an amber light was shown, followed by a red light.

At the end of the speech a gong was sounded.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

MEDICAL AID BY AIR

Plane From "Hermes" To Rescue

Singapore, Yesterday.

A plane from H.M.S. Hermes flew from Singapore with medical supplies and two doctors to the district near Pahang in reply to an appeal for medical assistance for a police officer, who was seriously ill there, to-day. The plane landed on the river near the district.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

PROFESSOR JEZE'S LECTURES

Huneforth To Be Given In Small Room

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

The University authorities here have decided in view of the hostile attitude of the Right-wing section of the students towards Professor Jeze, that the latter's lectures shall henceforth begin at the unusually early hour of half past seven in the morning. The Professor will lecture in future in a small room, the entrance to which can be more easily guarded, instead of a big hall.—Trans-Ocean Service.

TENSION IN SYRIA GENERAL STRIKE CONTINUES

TEN PEOPLE KILLED IN RIOTING

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Jerusalem, To-day.

The general strike, accompanied by violent disturbances, is still continuing throughout Syria, according to despatches reaching here, which add that 10 persons were killed yesterday in the riots. It is further stated that the French High Commissioner will probably travel to Paris in order to report to the Government and that in view of the continued tension the peace discussions between the High Commissioner and the Moslem leaders have been postponed.—Trans-Ocean Service.

FIRST HONOURS OF NEW REIGN

London, Yesterday.—The first Honours of the Reformation consisting of three Companionships the Royal Victorian Order, and 16 Memberships of the Order, have been conferred on 17 naval and army officers and five naval gunners who helped to draw King George's body to Westminster Hall and the chapel at Windsor.—Reuter.

SMITHFIELD STRIKE

Sunday Joints Are Safe

London, Yesterday.

In spite of the strikers' assertion to the contrary, the Smithfield strike is expected to be settled to-morrow. The negotiations are now in the hands of the transport workers' union and the strikers have nothing to gain by prolonging the strike to another week.

The distribution of meat is now so well organised that Londoners have no fear that they will not have their Sunday joint.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

FEELING OF OPTIMISM

London: Although no developments took place yesterday regarding the strike in the Smithfield market, the newspapers report a feeling of optimism among those in the closest touch with the situation that work will be resumed in the early hours of Monday morning. In the meantime no arrangements have been made for the continuation of the emergency organisation by which supplies have reached retailers during this week, but it can easily be revived and developed in case of necessity.—British Wireless Service.

BROWN'S APPEAL WITHDRAWN

Will Serve Sentence In America

Shanghai, Yesterday.

J. Warner Brown, sentenced to five years' imprisonment in connection with the Raven frauds, has withdrawn his appeal from the Circuit Court of Appeals, San Francisco.

It has been tentatively arranged to put Brown on board the s.s. President McKinley on February 18 to go to America to serve his sentence. He will be eligible for parole at the end of one-third of his time.—Reuter.

NEW OFFENSIVE PLANNED

GRAZIANI TO PENETRATE PROVINCE OF BALE?

ADVANCE ALONG RIVER SECTOR

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Addis Ababa, Yesterday.

Ras Imru has been ordered by the Negus to effect a junction with the forces of Ras Kassa, according to an official announcement here. Although the announcement fails to indicate the reason for this shifting, it is presumed that this means a new offensive.

The Italians made extensive reconnoitring flights, partly over the province of Chahar, south of Djibouti and Addis Ababa. These flights, according to the Abyssinians, confirm the rumours that General Graziani will attempt to advance into the province of Bale, in order to ascertain whether any Abyssinian forces are concentrated there.

Asmara: The troops of General Graziani are making further progress in their advance along the river Webbe Gestio, according to reports received here, which claim that the recent Abyssinian losses on that sector are more than 2,000 dead.

PARLEY IN PARIS

Coming Danube Basin Discussions

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.

The French Foreign Minister, M. Flandin, had a prolonged conversation with the British Ambassador, Sir George Clerk, yesterday, informing the latter of the results of his negotiations with the kings of Rumania and Bulgaria and with the Austrian Vice-Chancellor, Prince von Starheimberg.

M. Flandin, according to political circles here, assured the British Envoy that the parleys were of an entirely noncommittal character, and were merely to be regarded as a general preparation for the negotiations concerning the consolidation of the Danubian Basin. —Trans-Ocean Service.

NEW BANKNOTE ISSUES

By Farmers' Bank Of China

TOTAL VALUE OF $100,000,000

Shanghai, Yesterday.

The Chinese press reports that the Farmers' Bank of China has been authorised to issue a total of $100,000,000 worth of banknotes, by order of the Ministry of Finance.

The banknotes will be legal tender, the same as those of the Central Bank, the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications, and half of them will be used for distribution as loans to farmers.

The same order authorises the Farmers' Bank to take over the privilege hitherto given to various provincial and local banks for the issuance of banknotes. The reserves, 60 per cent. in cash and 40 per cent. in securities, held by the Farmers' Bank against the total issue of $100,000,000 worth of banknotes, however, will be transferred to the Treasury, the Central Bank, the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications for custody.

The first shipment of $5,000,000 worth of banknotes, which the Farmers' Bank ordered to be printed in England, has arrived at Shanghai and will be issued at the head office of the bank in Hankow. —Trans-Ocean Service.

ACCIDENT AT TOULON

TORPEDO FIRES ITSELF

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Toulon, Yesterday.

An accident which caused considerable damage among the fishermen in this harbour occurred here yesterday, when a torpedo from a manoeuvring warship fired itself automatically, and started moving in the direction of a fortunately unmanned trawler, which was hit and sunk. The torpedo continued on its way, until it finally exploded in one of the harbour basins. —Trans-Ocean Service.

Last Parade Of An Old Soldier

By H. E. GRAVES

THE Guardsman drew his full height and returned glare for glare. Through the office window of the Institution for the Poor, the Australian sun beat in upon his dim eyes. No workhouse clothes could hide the eagle poise.
"Porpoise," he said with finality, slamming work-garbled hands upon the desk before him. "And if me son was alive he'd have more to say."
The Deputy Assistant Master steamed and fatly bounced. His glasses fell away.
"You've already had ya tobacco stopped, Greenfields," he gobbled. "You're a—you're a menace to the peaceable inmates here. Now for this—this gross impertinence, you'll stay in and do a task when the Guards band arrives from England to-morrow."
"I will not," The Guardsman was positive. "Oh, yes, you will." The D.A.M. was even more positive. "Just because the Master's away you seem to think you can go on as you please."
"The Master's an old soldier like me," remarked the Guardsman. "But you're different, you three-a-penny, chicken-livered."
"Don't you swear at me, Greenfields," The D.A.M. hovered on the rim of apoplexy.
"I'm seventy-six come next Michaelmas," The Guardsman looked down on Authority. "I've lived more than half me life here in Australia. I'm one of the men who went out into the desert and helped to make the place; but now that I'm too old to work—"
"You go back to ya ward," "So you'll keep an old Grenadier in when the band comes for the celebrations?"
Medals Bright
"Ya go back to ya ward at once, and don't forget, next time this Mrs.—er—Wackett comes with her daughter, she'll have to be told you're not entertaining. How will you like that, Mr. Greenfields?"

"You leave Ma Wackett out of this." "You go back to ya ward." "You go to the devil!"
When the sun rose red in the dawn, the Guardsman with his medals left the Institution by the fire escape. Eight miles down the road the city began. He held up his silvery head and his years and marched. Eyes were dim, but memories green and medals bright.
He smiled as he thought of the plump Ma Wackett and Lindy. He chuckled over Ma and her Vacancies For Respectable Working Men. But Lindy, bright twelve-year sprig of the Wacketts, was different. He remembered her giving check to Respectable Working Men. He brought to mind the days before he had grown too old to work, when he had lived in peace with the Wacketts.
Corporal Tom Greenfields, Grenadier Guards.
Eight miles was a long way, but the welcome at the other end was worth it. In their back-street lodging-house the Wacketts were waiting.
"I'm here by the skin o' me teeth," the Guardsman told them. "The D. A. M. tried to stop me yesterday, so I ups and told him a few things he won't forget in a hurry. If me boy had been alive he'd have had more to say."
"Tried to stop you when the Guards are nearly here?" Lindy breathed flame. "Ugh!"
"That's more or less what I said," agreed the Guardsman. They left together after much tea and trimmings; the Guardsman with measured tread, Lindy walking sedately as becomes the young woman about town, and Ma at a good, useful gallop.
In the narrow, main streets the crowds were massing. The sun had already gathered strength, and the people perspired. They stiffened, but who cared? The Guards were coming.
"In here, Miss Greenfields. Lindy shoved, the Guardsman apologized, and Ma slipped to the kerb. Indignant recipients of the shoves spluttered.
The three had the best view in town.
But Glory be, right across the road the Deputy Assistant Master gobbled again. His glare was on the Guardsman.
The Guardsman returned glare for glare. His medals were bright.
Down the road there came a mighty drumming. The crowds surged and the policemen swore.
"Hold tight, Lindy. Now you watch me salute."
"Oo—Oo, Miss Greenfields, here they come."
England was there when the Guards went by. They came down the road with unhurried step, so easy, so confident, stately and calm. Tall bearskins, scarlet and gold, clean blare of brass and the steady beat of drums.
"Hark at 'em, Lindy. Hark at the cheering. Now you watch me. You watch me give them the Guards' salute."

Public Hero
The cheering stormed to thunder, and even the worried traffic.

THE NEW PARIS
EVENING SILHOUETTE

MODES and MODELS

LATEST IS THE SAIL SKIRT

PARIS couturiers are showing more beautiful and poetic evening gowns for Spring than is usual in the mid-season, when the accent is usually placed on daytime clothes. This proves afresh that women are once more "going places and doing things" nearly every evening, and that when they go out they are dressing up.

A great many quite different evening silhouettes are favoured and there is a wide leeway in the choice of décolletages. Consequently there will be no excuse for not looking one's most devastating best this Spring.

Each silhouette dictates the type of material in which it should be developed; or isn't it rather the material that suggests the silhouette? In any case, both are as essentially joined as Siamese twins.

Ottoman is being revived by several leading couturiers, among them Schiaparelli, Lucien Lelong and Maggy Rouff. Schiaparelli is going in for it in a big way. Its stiff-ribbed surface adapts it to her new "sail skirt" silhouette, the most novel variation of the flaring tunic. The "sail" is an apron-tunic attached to the skirt at the side seams, giving an oddly chic, square effect to the front of the silhouette. This effect is carried further by the square front décolletage. The back and underskirt are so tight that they form a veritable "mast." Only the zipper fastening at the back makes possible its glove-tight fit.

For formal evening wear Schiaparelli features Ottoman in a bright pink; it contrasts charmingly with her new butterfly-wing-blue enamel belts and jewellery. Fawn-brown and beige make a contrasting tunic evening frock for less formal occasions. To emphasise the form of a tunic suit this designer edges the black Ottoman of which it is made with heavy gold embroidery. This suit, used for the cocktail hour, has a short-sleeved chemise dress and one of the new half-length tunic coats.

Back To The Orient

The newest tunics flare widely from a slightly lowered waistline. They are of intermediate length, worn over sheath or hobble skirts, and effect a proportion that reminds one strongly of the Orientalism that was so rampant in the early days of Diaghilev's first Russian ballet, when Bakst, Barbier and Lepape were the artists and arbiters of fashion.

Alx, who has such a flair for all things Oriental, creates some of the most interesting tunic lines seen in Paris. Her "dervish tunic" evening coat is

HAVE you changed since those wedding bells pealed merrily, young marrieds? Just ask yourself that question, and whether it is really a change for the better, too.

I wonder if you've ever asked yourself that question—seriously, I mean? It may have floated into your mind one night as you were lying thinking about yourself vaguely in a sleepless hour. But have you ever pondered over the problem when you were in full possession of your everyday faculties?

But just ask yourself that question, and with this addition: "If he wouldn't marry me again, why wouldn't he?"

Well, generally speaking, if he wouldn't, it's your own fault. Oh, yes, it is!

It is probably because you are no longer the type of woman you were when he married you.

First Years

In the first years of marriage we are all apt to try to mould our characters on that of our husbands, so that we may more easily fit in with what we imagine is likely to please him.

But what a mistake! Your husband probably chose you with all the care and consideration he was capable of—just as you, in a very much lesser degree, would choose a Paris model gown.

Having bought your frock, do you then proceed to improve on it? Or have you the sense to leave it as it is? The model must be left as it is. It's just as fatal in choosing models to have the back of one made with the front of another. The artist who first designed it knew exactly how it should be made.

Be Yourself

And so it is with you. When you began trying to alter yourself for your husband's benefit you were spoiling the model he chose. You began to be somebody he did not choose, and may be he is a little weary of the result—just as you would be with a renovated frock.

If you are going to be happy, don't try to be anything—just do all you can to stay as you've always been. Men's characteristics mostly remain the same, and this is the very reason why you should strive to stand "as you were."

The surest way to peace of mind, to the certainty that you are the one mate in the world for the man who married you, is to remain true to yourself, as well as to him, and to fight any tendency you have to be a "new" self.

to go home. Don't you think I ought to be able to choose my own life?

INDEPENDENT,
The Peak.

Yes, my dear, you have a right to your own life—but only up to a point. Since you are so very young I think you would be wise to go home with your parents now and see how you like England. You may be very surprised to find what a nice country it is! Think of the new interests and the new friends you will make. And after all you can always come back again to Shanghai. You have plenty of time to spare a year or two for playing before you settle down to a life career. I know I shouldn't hesitate what to do!

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

THE ancients thought that it was possible to read both the character and the fortune of everyone by an ingenious system of giving numerical values to each letter of their names. These name-fortunes are based on the old Pythagorean method of numbering the letters of the alphabet and also taking into account the astrological values assigned to them.

FEDERATION WIN GOVERNOR'S CUP AS RESULT OF ONE-ALL DRAW

IRELAND & SCOTLAND IN RUGBY FINAL

UNEXPECTED RESULTS IN FIRST TOURNEY

NUMEROUS CHANGES IN TEAMS

THE semi-final round ties in the local international rugby series, held at Causeway Bay yesterday, resulted in unexpected wins for Ireland and Scotland over England and Wales respectively.

Changes were numerous, Ireland being compelled to make three, Lt. Fraser, S. C. Archer and J. H. McElroy being absentees while Hopkins, B. Hynes and Hyams were brought in to fill the gaps. England were without Withers, who came late, Rose and Mne. Light and Lt. Winters, who were replaced by O'Brien and Isley, two civilian newcomers, A. B. Woodman and Lt. Greene of the Navy. M. W. Scott was an absentee for Scotland and Orr-Ewing of the Navy was brought into the pack, while Evans, of the Navy, who is on the injured list, was also an absentee for Wales and Fus. Watkins was brought into the side.

Although conditions were ideal for rugby, play on the whole was disappointing and the first encounter between Ireland and England was a tale of dropped passes, two over the goal-line resulting in five-yard scrums! But the Scotland-Wales game was chockful of thrills and open play and the better side won.

Scotland Backs In Limelight

Orr-Ewing Outstanding Forward On View

FLOYD PLAYS HIMSELF INTO COLONY FIFTEEN

Scotland secured a well-deserved victory over Wales in their local international rugby encounter on the Navy ground at Causeway Bay yesterday, winning by a goal, a try and a penalty goal (11 points) to a penalty goal (3 points) in a match featured by open play.

Scotland made one change in their advertised side, Comdr. D. Orr-Ewing coming into the pack, where he rendered invaluable aid and was the outstanding forward on display. It was a treat to see him secure possession in the line-outs and gain several yards with the ball at his feet. He led the pack in many such movements.

Euman in Limelight
Euman, the Scotland back, was decidedly good. He completely outshone Precoe, whose defence was again very weak. Euman tackled low and invariably grassed his man, while his touch-kicking was of an excellent length. Precoe, however, was also up to the mark in this department.

At three-quarter Scotland were superior, St. Clair Ford, Warren Wright, all Navy backs, being very dangerous, but particularly St. Clair Ford, whose side-steps and wonderful swerve would have carried him through twice had it not been for the deadly tackling of Floyd.

Disjointed Welsh Backs
Bonnar and Hutchinson combined well and the latter was very quick to send his three-quarters away, although there were occasions when he could have made more headway before parting with the ball. The Welsh backs were very disjointed and although given many openings failed to make use of them, but passing or weak handling being their biggest handicap. Rice, Evans made a welcome reappearance as a centre, but was too well marked to be dangerous, while his good passing was never made use of by Edwards.

Evans was a fast and resourceful scrum-half and Floyd was worth his place as the result of a brilliant display, his defence, and particularly his kicking, being superb at all times. On yesterday's display alone he is worth a place in the Colony side to meet the New Zealand Universities' side on Friday week.

Forwards Shine
Both packs were up to the mark and among those who were most conspicuous were Orr-Ewing, Coppin, Gummell and Chapman, for Scotland, and Wulford, Humphreys and Chaney for Wales.

Wales opened the scoring after 10 minutes when Precoe converted a penalty goal, but Bonnar went over for Scotland soon after from a 15-yard scrum, Warren converting with a fine kick to give Scotland the lead. Just before the interval Wales were penalised for off-side.

were the pick of the pack, the latter getting the ball back nine times out of 10 in the tight scrums, although the backs ruined every opportunity with bad passing and running.

The game was devoid of thrills except for the first 10 or 15 minutes when the England backs were seen in some thrilling movements, Benson sending Frost over, only to see him drop the ball! Soon after Benson was injured.

Another "Sitter" Thrown Away

In the second half Ireland enjoyed more of the play and Knox went over from a 15-yard scrum, but also dropped the ball when a try seemed certain.

Gillespie, however, sent Ireland ahead with a fine penalty goal. Soon after Knox sent a long pass out to Kirkwood who sent D. Hynes away. The Irish right centre drew Robertson before passing to Hynes, who scored wide of the posts. Gillespie, however, added the points with a very fine kick.

Just before the end of the England side rallied and, following loose play, L/Cpl. Harrison went over between the posts for Benson to convert.

Dr. J. A. R. Selby refereed and the teams were:—

Ireland—L. Cpl. Wall (Army); H. F. Hopkins (Club); Surg. Lt. Kirkwood (Navy); D. A. Hynes (Club); Cpl. Hyams (Army); B. J. Gallagher (Club); Lt. Knox (Navy); Lieut. Lincoln (Army); Bdm. BUT ASSOCIATION WERE SUPERIOR 'LIVE-WIRE' FORWARD BADLY NEEDED WONG WING SAVES CHINESE

THE second soccer game for the Governor's Cup drew an almost capacity crowd to Caroline Hill yesterday, and, with the Chinese already one leg up and the day's favourites, a great game was looked forward to, and these expectations were fully realised, except that the Association played at the top of their form, enjoying the best of almost all the exchanges, and yet could only force a draw, both sides scoring once.

Supporters of the Chinese Federation must surely feel that they were lucky to be let off with a draw after being so badly outclassed. Likewise, the Association "fans" must have wished for a "live-wire" forward to have put that extra little bit of "punch" into the countless opportunities that were allowed to fritter away.

In fairness to Leonard, who led a fast and energetic line well, and incidentally scored the Association's goal, it must be admitted that he was practically the only forward to test Wong Wing, and two of his efforts were fully deserving of goals, but Wong effected brilliant clearances on both occasions.

Rose and Talbot performed splendid work in bringing the ball forward, and their passing and positioning was without fault. On the wings, Bickford again found himself starved, but with the few chances he did receive he failed to reveal his best form, and Bertie Gosano was the best winger on the field. His ball control, clever tactics, and perfectly placed centres should have been better used. In approach movements the Association attack was very impressive, and the Chinese halves tried in vain to frustrate their quick inter-passing.

Beltrao found his top form; in tackling, positioning and distribution his display was exceptionally sound, and, with a fine pair of flanking halves in North and Bowers, the intermediate line gained a firm grip over the Federation attack—a grip they retained up to the final whistle.

Behind them, Swain and Wolverson worked in perfect unison, both kicking confidently and strongly, though Swain's clearances were at times inclined to be a little wild and badly placed, while Rowlands had no chance with the shot that beat him, but did everything else in his usual capable manner.

With Lee Wai-long literally smothered by Beltrao, Swain and Wolverson every time he attempted to make a run for goal, Tso definitely below "par" and very timid in a tackle, and with Cheuk Shek-kam working tremendously hard but almost always spoiling all his previous good efforts by a poor pass, the Federation attack was only seen in a few individual breakaways.

Lee had but one chance in the first half, and obtained the expected goal, though hampered by two opponents, but in the second half he had a glorious opportunity and it was only the brilliance of Rowlands that prevented a certain goal.

Young Shui-yick, in a strange position—at outside-left—contrived to put over some very accurate centres in the first half, but was well held by North later on.

OLYMPIC ICE HOCKEY

England Triumph Over Japan

GERMAN SUCCESS IN GIRLS' SKI EVENT

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Yesterday.

Play in the World Olympic Ice Hockey tournament was continued here this morning when Canada, the favourites, beat Austria by 5 goals to 2 and Poland overwhelmed Latvia by 9 goals to 2. England continued in winning vein by defeating Japan by three clear goals.

Despite her victory over Latvia, Poland failed to qualify for the Second Round, Canada and Austria being the highest scorers in their group and thus qualifying for the next round, which will see the best two teams of each group pitted against each other.

In the fourth group England and Sweden are practically assured of qualifying, while the winners of the other two groups will probably be determined later to-day.

Association Score

The Federation attack did not materialise until 80 minutes had elapsed, then came with its usual suddenness. Young Shui-yick sent the ball down the field for Lee to Lee Kwok-wai, above, gave Lee Wai-long the pass that resulted in the Federation's equaliser in yesterday's Governor's Cup match at Caroline Hill.

LARGE SENIOR LEAGUE SOCCER CARD TO-DAY

Rifles Favoured To Beat S. China "B"

GOOD SECOND DIVISION "NEEDLE" MATCH

An excellent soccer programme is offered the public to-day when no less than five First Division games and two Second Division encounters are down for decision, the "tit-bit" being the return senior clash between the Royal Ulster Rifles and South China "B," at Sookunpo.

South China "B," who have so far maintained a wonderful record, have yet to bow to defeat, having drawn five of their encounters, although they were very lucky to have done so last Saturday against the Rifles.

The Police encounter the Athletic at Kowloon, where another exciting struggle should ensue with the odds on the former team. The Athletic, despite several serious setbacks this season, have maintained good form and should give the Police a run for their money.

In the Second Division, the East-Lanes are favoured to beat the Navy, but must reproduce their very best form as the latter team still have a chance of regaining the junior championship they once held.

The East Lanes, leaders in the Junior Division, should beat South China easily.

The following is the forecast for to-day's fixtures, giving the favoured team in capital letters:—

THE FANLING HUNT

The Master of the Fanling Hunt has advised us that his Meetings on Sunday mornings at 11 o'clock are inconvenient for a number of people wishing to hunt, he has altered the time of the Sunday meets to 3 o'clock. This means that both the Wednesday and Sunday Meets will now be at 3 o'clock.

The combined Downhill and Slalom race took place this morning and resulted in a victory for Frau Christl Cranz (Germany) with 72 points. She was closely followed by another German girl, Frau Knehe Grasseger, with 76 points and a Swiss girl, Frau Erna Steuri, with 77.2 points.

The Norwegian winner of Friday's downhill race, Miss Lella Schom Nielsen, was placed fourth with 80.1 points.

The final winner of the combined Downhill event, who will be awarded the first gold medal of this year's Olympic Games, will be decided by a complicated method of calculation and the name will be announced later in the day.

ATHLETIC WIN RECREIO WELL BEATEN ON THE STADIUM GROUND

Handicapped By Loss Of Demee

FERNANDES OUTSTANDING

The Chinese Athletic garnered an easy two points at Caroline Hill yesterday, when they completely outplayed a weak Recreio side in their Second League soccer encounter, winning by five clear goals.

Recreio could make but little headway, being well held by the Athletic halves, and throughout the second half, with Demee off the field injured, and the Athletic attacking persistently, they were forced to rely purely on defensive measures.

Fernandes played a great game, first at centre-half, and later at left-back, and it was his stalwart and tireless efforts that kept the scoring within reasonable limits. He was well supported by Silva and Marques; and Xavier, in goal, dealt capably with innumerable difficult shots.

The Athletic played fast and attractive football, combining method with clever teamwork, and their forward line, well led by Chui Choon-ying, were seen in many well-carried out raids.

Two Dangerous Wingers

Cheong Moon-wing and Lai Wah-tai were two useful wingers, accurate in centring, and the complete line was always well supported by the halves, among whom Le Wai-man was almost a sixth forward, scoring two particularly fine goals.

The Athletic opened the scoring through Chui Choon-ying, and quickly followed this up with a second goal, Chan Choon-ying's shot ennobling off Chui Chi-pin into the net.

In the second half Chow Yin-chong drove in a beautiful first-timer following a clearance off the line by Fernandes, and an unlucky "hands" against Fernandes in the penalty area was converted by Le Wai-man, who netted the fifth goal for the Athletic from a free-kick 30 yards out.

CLUB JUNIORS TRIUMPH

But Kowloon Should Have Done Better

On the Kowloon ground yesterday the Club Juniors defeated Kowloon Juniors by 4 goals to 1 in their Second Division soccer match.

The score does not give a true indication of the game, as Kowloon enjoyed most of the play in the second period, their forwards again falling badly in front of goal.

Facing the sun, Kowloon were forced on the defensive from the commencement, and, after a number of attempts, the Club opened the score through Duncan from a good centre by Himsworth. Soon afterwards Fisher attempted a long shot to register the second goal, Olsen being badly at fault.

Continuing to press, Fowler, receiving in the centre of the field, then ran through the Kowloon defence to score from close range.

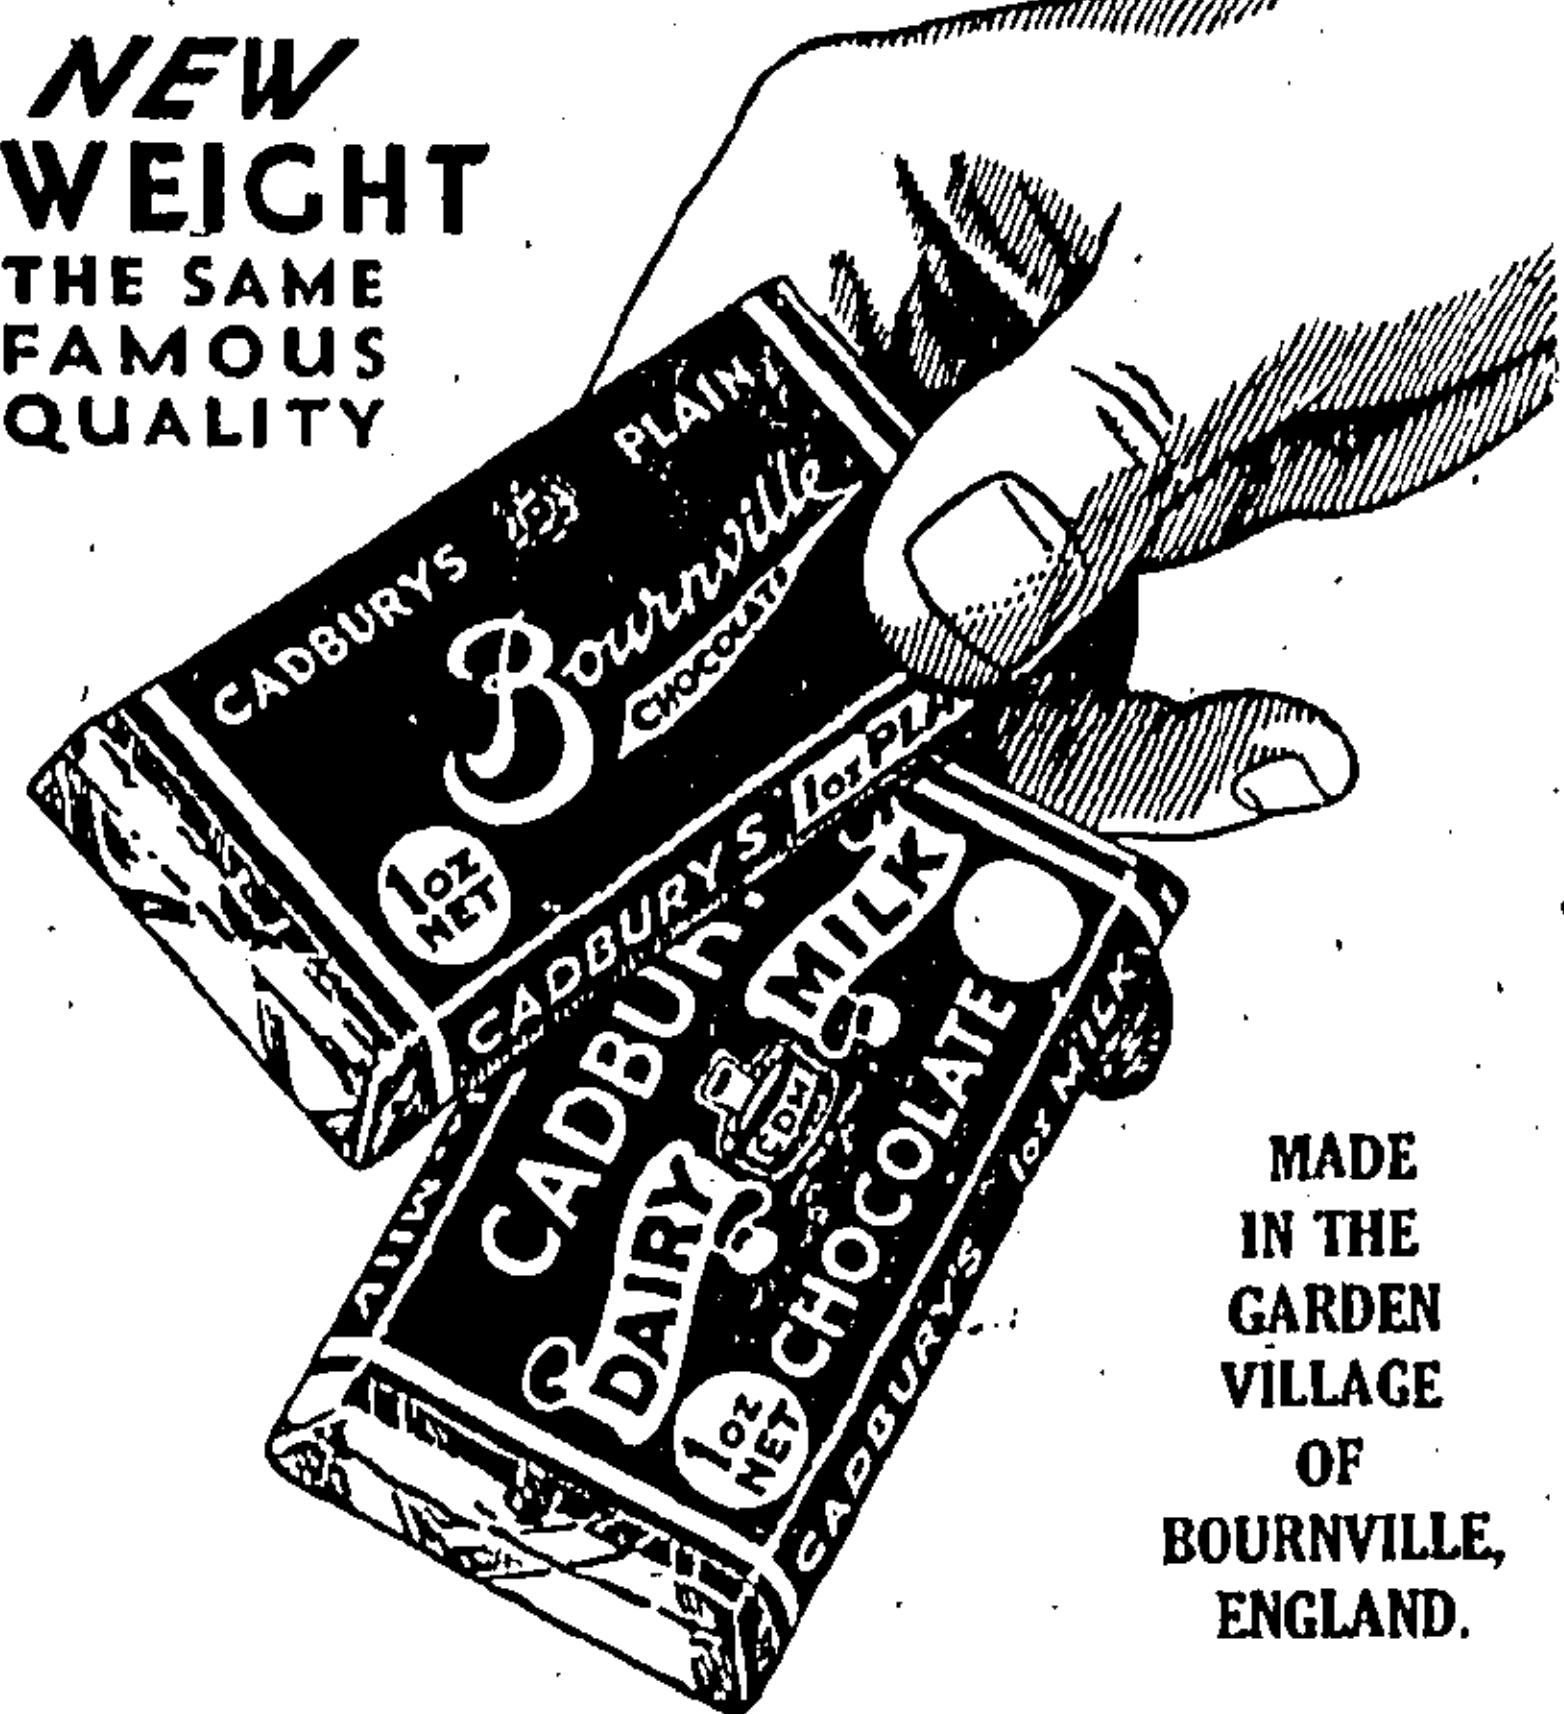

After the interval Kowloon made a number of positional changes which appeared to strengthen the forward line, and within a minute from the start Humphreys, who was allowed to take the ball down the field unchallenged, scored a neat goal.

The Club were forced on the defensive for the greater period of the second half, but weak finishing brought no further goals for Kowloon and, following a scramble in front of the Kowloon goal, Duncan scored again for the Club within the last few minutes of the game.

In the senior division of the cricket league yesterday Civil Service Cricket Club scored a meritorious win over the Army at Sookunpo by 4 wickets.

This was in no small measure due to J. E. Richardson who, in scoring 101 runs, found the balls on 18 occasions. He was also associated in a second wicket partnership with A. E. Perry that realised 121 runs.

SCRATCHED ROYAL WINDOWS

Recent Discovery At St. James's PalaceCavalier Times Recalled
By Window Writing

(By SIR CECIL HARCOURT-SMITH)

A curious discovery was made during the exhibition at St. James's Palace of the wedding presents to the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester. On a glass pane in one of the windows of the Throne Room is an inscription, written with a diamond, stating that

"Thos Smith broke his Rist and fell in the Garden throw this window, May the 30th 1767."

The spelling of the inscription is obviously not according to Cocker; but even in the second half of the 18th century the rules of spelling, especially in other than printed matter, were not too strictly observed. On the other hand, the style of lettering is decorative, and would seem to be that of an educated person.

Who, then, was Thomas Smith, and what were the details of the accident here recorded? What was he doing in the Throne Room, to which presumably only privileged persons or officials have usually had access? The records of the Lord Chamberlain's office throw no light on the question, and it is left to the imagination to propose a solution of the problem.

Gallant, or Glazier?

Various suggestions have been made as to the possible identity of Thomas Smith. It is a little unfortunate that the hero, or victim, of the occurrence did not possess a more distinctive patronymic.

Was our Thomas a hero? Was he some gallant who broke his "Rist" climbing to the window in an escapade of love, or in some hot-blooded difference with a rival in the affections of some lady of fashion? If so, why should he have fallen through the window, unless he were struggling near it or climbing to an assignation? Both alternatives most unseemly in connection with the Throne Room.

Alas, it must be confessed that there is a much more commonplace alternative which is more than probable: that Thomas was either a glazier or a window-cleaner.

We may probably dismiss the window-cleaner, as it is scarcely possible that so humble an official would have dared to leave his permanent mark on a Palace window. A glazier, however, was in those days a craftsman of some repute. Glaziers from early times were not only men who set glass in windows, but artists who painted on glass.

The Loyalist's Prayer

In 1638 Charles I. granted a charter incorporating the freemen of the "Mystery or Arte of Glaziers and Painters of Glasse of the City of London." So that glaziers had good reason to bless King Charles I.

We know that in many public buildings of all ages masons have left their marks or their names as the sign-manual of work they have done. There is no reason why a glazier should not have been prompted by the same desire of immortalising himself. As a matter of fact there is in the London Museum a pane of glass from the east window of Old Temple Bar which bears the inscription, "J. W. Sewell, glazier, July 22nd, 1638"—the very year in which the glaziers' charter was granted.

One discovery is apt to lead to another. Since the Thomas Smith inscription was found it transpires that one of the windows in the Guard Room at St. James's Palace is engraved with similar inscriptions. One of these appears to have a special historical significance. It runs:

William Rutherford,
God Bless Ki.

The writing, which is well engraved, compares with that of the Sewell inscription, and would appear to be of much the same, or slightly later, date.

When we remember that King Charles I., according to tradition, spent in this very room at St. James's Palace the last night before his execution, it is not difficult to picture the circumstances. William Rutherford, who may have been in attendance on the King, having inscribed his name, felt the desire, which must have been in many minds at the time, to add an expression of his loyalty to his Master.

We may suppose that he intended to write "King Charles," but before his task was completed he was interrupted, probably by one of the Roundhead Guards, and not allowed to finish his self-imposed task. One wonders what, if any, form of penalty he underwent for this audacious assertion of his opinions.

If this supposition is well founded, it is unfortunate that he was unable to add the date, which might have strengthened the probability of the explanation here given.

Raleigh and His Queen
The habit of engraving inscriptions on window-panes was, of course, not uncommon in the 17th and 18th centuries. The classical instance in history is the account in Fuller's "Worthies" of the supposed exchange of couplets between Queen Elizabeth and Sir Walter Raleigh. He is said to have written on a window in Greenwich Palace

"Fain would I climb Yet fear I to fall."
and the Queen to have replied
"If thy heart falls thee Climb not at all."

This pretty story, like that of Raleigh's new purple cloak spread over the puddle for Gloriana to walk upon, rests on somewhat uncertain evidence; but there is this in favour of their probability, that they are both in keeping with what we know of Raleigh's character. It is at least significant that the episodes seem to have occurred just at the time when, from being comparatively unknown, he sprang suddenly into favour.

Raleigh was no mean versifier; of his chief poem, "Cynthia," no less a critic than Edmund Spenser wrote to him in 1590, describing it as "your own excellent conceit." It is not unlikely, therefore, that he may have couched his ambitious sentiment in verse, even of so artless a form.

The two inscriptions in St. James's Palace would thus seem to stand in a separate category from the innumerable names which in all times and places have been carved or written, sometimes recording the vows of lovers but generally in the desire to perpetuate a memory or a thought. Orlando, in "As You Like It," glorifies the rather vulgar habit of cutting names on tree-trunks when he says, "Tongues I'll hang on every tree."

"Peter Abbott"
The walls of the dungeons in old Newgate Prison and the Tower show the tragic side. On the other hand, the back of the Coronation Chair in Westminster Abbey is scored with the more idle and purposeless of such inscriptions. One of the latest and more curious of these is the record of one Peter Abbott, who wagged that he would write his name at night on Purcell's monument in the north aisle.

The person in question, who is otherwise completely unknown, hid among the tombs and effected his horrid purpose; not only that, but he wrote on the Coronation Chair: "Peter Abbott slept in this Chair July 5, 1800." As Dean Stanley remarked, he thereby proved "not only the reckless irreverence of the intruder, but the universal attraction of the relic." One may hope that Thomas Smith's inscription is due to a less frivolous cause.

THE PASSING HOUR

WHAT with entertaining the officers and crew of the "Karlruhe" and preparing to entertain the New Zealand Universities' team and quite a number of distinguished individuals from all parts of the world, Hong Kong just now is enjoying to the full the benefits of its wonderful geographical position. We are apt to overlook the fact that in welcoming them we are only fulfilling the conditions, or at least the purpose, with which we came into existence as a separate community. It is interesting in reading the life and times of Captain Elliot to find that the grant of the island was requested in the course of the negotiations that followed the first Anglo-Chinese war on the ground that it would be useful to provide a place where visitors from all the coastal ports, and travellers from the distant parts of the world could meet without danger or disturbance, and could build depots at which they could store their goods in security pending the bargaining for sale or exchange, without being hampered by any duty or restriction. Probably the lapse of a century would nowadays be held to make even a treaty like that of Chienfu obsolete, but when we discuss questions of tariff and preferential duties, and so on we are apt to forget that the grant of the island was not made unconditionally.

EARLY SETTLERS AND THEIR IDEALS

At any rate the first English residents of Hong Kong were so thoroughly sick of Customs officials at Canton and trade preferences at Macau, that even at a time when Adam Smith was rapidly gaining recruits for Free Trade every day, the Hong Kong merchants were perhaps the most enthusiastic free-traders of all. Though it cannot be said that these old memories have always been kept in mind, on the whole the tradition has stuck, and we are perhaps the only surviving cosmopolitan community both in fact and in theory.

GEORGE BORROW

WHICH is not to say that cosmopolitanism in any way alters the national type for good or evil. One of the modern discoveries is that Governments have been too nervous about "denationalisation." Neither education nor travel nor long residence in an alien population will obliterate the features and characters of any of the established types of mankind. And that was why Professor Simpson's choice of George Borrow as the subject of his address at the English Association last Tuesday was doubly interesting, and also why his enthusiasm was criticised with unusual frankness by an opposition headed by His Excellency the Governor. The particular subheading that would be pinned on to Borrow in a human museum would be that he was a specimen of the English self-made man. One naturally thinks of the man rather than of his books, for the impression he makes is definitely one of personality. There is a definite character to argue about and readers will either be Borrowians or anti-Borrowians. What he differed from the numerous crowd of self-made men was that he had the gift of expression, of putting himself onto paper.

SELF-MADE MEN

THE great advantage of the Borrowian type of man is that he is on a level with the people he chooses as subjects. Let us compare him with some of the other writers with whom he was compared as a traveller who gives us his passing adventures in companionship with casual comrades met on the road. There was "R.L.S." in such a book as "Travels with a donkey in the Cevennes." He puts up at a one-bedroomed inn, and carefully diverts his eyes while a girl dresses to get into the next bed. Borrow would have sat chatting to her till he extorted some dramatic story of family romance. Hilary Belloc in "The Path to Rome" leaves us with the impression how charmingly he draws on his stores of learning to put a girl's bobbin of her own would never frame round commonplace sighs and sounds. Nobody mentioned Watta-Dunton who, like Borrow, were religious men who had no was fond of gypsies, and who ex-

LIVING OUR LIVES TO THE FULL NEED FOR COMPLETE DEVELOPMENT

KEEPING IN CONTACT WITH THE DIVINE

(By The Rev. J. N. LEWIS BRYAN)

I read the other day in a certain book that one man in describing another referred to him as "a man with a shabby soul." Strictly speaking, the title is not correct, for a man does not possess a soul; he is a soul. What a man possesses is his body and his brain. To separate a man from his soul is to destroy him; therefore a man with a shabby soul is just a shabby man, no more and no less.

We were thinking, in last week's article, about the cultivation of the highest type of manhood. It is the supreme aim of all religious, social, and educational effort. It is the one great secret of a successful life. One-sidedness is deformity. Completion is essential in character as balance is to beauty.

Living Rightly
It is not our business to-day to teach men how to die. Our supreme task is to teach them how to live. The man or woman who lives right will die right.

And life is such a splendid thing, that it should be lived to the very fullest possible limit. But (and there is always a but!) no one really lives his life to the fullest who neglects the most important part of it, i.e. his soul.

Literature provides us with many examples of the man with the shabby soul. Probably the best-known is that drawn by that master of caricature, Charles Dickens, in "A Christmas Carol": the man Ebenezer Scrooge. There you have a man with a soul worn threadbare, mean, paltry, despicable. The shabbiness of his soul expresses itself in the meanness of his mind.

You will find the man with a shabby mind constantly on the stage of history—men who have played a mean part in life, who have forfeited the right to manhood through prejudice, intolerance, bigotry, ignorance and hypocrisy. You will find the shabby soul behind the royal robe, the soldier's tunic, the clerical collar, the scholar's gown, the mechanic's overalls, the collar's cap.

Influence On Others
Let us make no mistake about it. We do not influence others by what we seem to be, but by what we are. A smart suit does not hide a shabby soul. However much a man may seek to camouflage himself, sooner or later the real man within speaks, and you find, behind the well-cut coat, no more reality than in a tailor's dummy.

We simply cannot afford to neglect the comment "here is a scholarly man who evidently got up his subject carefully." Of Borrow we say "here is an Englishman who met a number of odd non-English people that it would be great fun to meet ourselves. We should like to hear some more of them."

REALISM

THE odd thing is that after feeling that these eccentric people must have been just like that, a doubt arises whether there ever really were gypsies like the Flaming Timman, the Man in Black, and so on. And at this point the genius of the man triumphs over anything like pedantic realism, because we end up with saying that if they did not exist they ought to have done. Realism without imagination is mere pedantry.

PREJUDICES

OF course like Cobbett, Borrow was a bundle of prejudices, of which he unconsciously leaves a vivid record. Cobbett called to propose marriage to a girl one day, but in the preliminary conversation she asked her sister for a bobbin of thread. The proposal was never made, because he felt how charmingly she draws on his stores of learning to put a girl's bobbin of her own would never frame round commonplace sighs and sounds. Nobody mentioned Watta-Dunton who, like Borrow, were religious men who had no was fond of gypsies, and who exhibit the highest and best in any department of life. To do so is inevitably to have the shabby soul. The man who neglects the worship of the highest and stays in bed to read nothing but the murders and divorce cases dished up in certain sensational papers is not going to develop a soul of which he will be very proud when he leaves his body in the grave.

Just here lies the root cause of that much-discussed subject, the decline of religion. Whenever there is religious decline, it does not lie so much with the Church or the clergy; the root cause lies in the willingness of so many people to walk about with shabby, shrivelled souls. They allow their higher natures to die of atrophy. They develop their splendid bodies and neglect mind and soul, and so live only one-third of their possible life. Others develop body and mind to the total neglect of their souls, and so live a two-thirds life.

Full Development

The only man who lives a full life is he that develops body, mind and soul in their true proportion, without neglect of any. Such a man, be his days long or short, has known the real meaning of life, for life is reckoned not by the number of days or years, but by what we put into it and draw out of it, to the true development of every side of our being.

Perhaps one of the best illustrations of how a man's soul may become shrivelled and shabby is that given by Charles Darwin in his autobiography. He was one of the truest and most lovable of all mortals, yet in that autobiography he makes a frank and significant statement that he had lost the sense of beauty, art and music, and also the sense of the spiritual and infinite, through life-long devotion to material things.

"Up to the age of thirty or beyond it," writes the great scientist, "poetry such as Milton, Byron, Wordsworth gave me great delight; but now for many years I cannot endure to read a line of poetry. I have also lost my taste for pictures and music. My mind seems to have become a machine for grinding general laws out of large collections of facts. This has caused the paralysis of that part on which the highest tastes depend."

Here is a man—a brilliant man—who has lost his soul-sense; his soul had become threadbare and shabby.

Absence Of The Divine

What is the cause of the existence of the shabby soul? In every case it is the absence of the divine. No man can live his life to the full, or attain to the highest standard of existence, who neglects the divine side of his nature. The soul which seeks to live without God is a shrivelled thing, a shabby thing, and neither the muscles of Hercules nor the robes of Solomon can make it anything else.

In this splendid day, splendid in spite of all the turmoil of the time, splendid because of the glorious opportunity which it offers to the rising generation, there is only one thing in the long run which counts, and that is character. The men of the future will be men of character; and character is but the expression of the soul. If that is true, you cannot expect a good character in a shabby soul any more than you can expect to gather grapes from (Continued at Foot of Next Col.)

JAPANESE ARTIST PAYS VISIT

Exhibition At The Gloucester

CHARACTERISTIC TECHNIQUE AND TRAINING

Last week the Gloucester Hotel again offered hospitality to an art exhibition. I am glad to say that this time it was an exhibition which your critic could leave without gloomy thoughts, except for sad contemplation of the young Japanese painter's optimism. If Mr. Koho Sonobe hoped that the enthusiasm of the local appreciative amateurs would leave some tangible proof in his pocket-book, well—he is richer in experience.

I think the Travel Association should warn all artists intending to hold an exhibition in Hong Kong. A signboard in the harbour with a quotation from Dante would be quite appropriate, although by the time the posters and brochures published by the Association reach their destinations, artists all over the world will have abandoned all hope.

Mr. Koho Sonobe, according to the brief biographical note in his catalogue, was born in 1906 and is a graduate of the Tokyo Art School. He is a member of the Committee of Koza Sha (an association of artists) and has exhibited his paintings for the past five years in the Annual Empire Exhibition at Tokyo. He has just held an exhibition of his work in Bangkok under the auspices of the Art Association of Siam.

His work shows the thorough and careful training and the refinement of taste which is so characteristic of the traditional schools of Japan. Except for a few sketches made during his stay in Siam, all his pictures suggest a serene quietness and deep contemplation of nature. There is such an air of ceremonial dignity about them that it is difficult for a European living in a turmoil to believe in such a detachment from everyday life.

But behind the dignified mask one gets here and there glimpses of humour, as in the picture entitled "Lettuce". It is only a quiet and gentle smile, like that of a superior grown-up regarding playful children.

But all ceremonial gestures vanish in his pictures painted in Siam. They are vigorous, the lines less careful, the technique less polished. The artist shows that he can be aware of life around him and that life is not only the gambols of gold-fishes in a cool pond.

HOW CANARDS ARISE FICTION MISTAKEN FOR ACTUAL FACTS STARTLING REVELATIONS IN PARIS

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.

Startling revelations about the ways in which international relations are maliciously poisoned and diabolical designs imputed against Germany without the faintest justification, are made by two well-known Paris publications, the political weekly "Vendredi" and the sports paper "L'Auto."

BRITISH COLONIAL POSSESSIONS

"Stop Me & Take One" Policy Depreciated

GEORGE LANSBURY'S SPEECH CAUSES MISGIVING

London, Yesterday.

The debate in the House of Commons on Wednesday on Mr. George Lansbury's motion in favour of a world economic conference and the reference of many speakers, to colonial problems have aroused disquiet in some quarters, which will find expression in both Houses of Parliament in the next few weeks.

Opposition to the implied suggestion in some speeches of consideration of the redistribution of mandated or colonial territories is voiced by two schools of opinion, one of which is concerned at the possibility of danger in any transference which might be contemplated to the principle of trusteeship to which the British Colonial Administration generally conforms in practice, and which is embodied more formally in the League mandate system.

The other school repudiates any idea of the cessation of the responsibilities Britain has assumed and depreciates the doubts which may be created in colonial areas by such discussions.

VISCOUNT ELIANK'S DEMAND—In the House of Lords Viscount Eliank proposes to call attention to the "sense of misgiving and unrest being aroused in the minds of the inhabitants of British Colonies by the suggestions now being made in letters to the press and elsewhere for the handing over of the British Colonies to other nations, either directly or under League of Nations Mandates, and to ask His Majesty's Government to declare their policy in this matter." The motion will be debated in March.

COMMONS DEBATE

Next Wednesday in the House of Commons questions will be addressed both to the Foreign Secretary and the Secretary for the Colonies. Both ask for assurances from the Government. The Liberal member, Mr. Mander, wishes for confirmation that the Government has no intention of handing over territories held under British Mandate, and Sir Henry Page-Croft desires a guarantee that the Government is not prepared to "make the British Colonies the subject of barter in any world conference."—British Wireless Service.

LONDON NAVAL TALKS

Size Of Battleships Considered

London, Yesterday.

The Naval Conference has joined issue on the size of battleships. At a meeting of the sub-committee each delegation stated its qualitative desiderata. The United States requested a 35,000-ton battleship with 16-inch guns, but was willing to consider 14-inch guns and agreed not to construct 10,000-ton cruisers during the currency of any treaty reached. It also supported the British proposal for 2,000-ton submarines.

In effect all the four Powers agreed to practically everything except the battleship, which will be referred to the heads of the delegations for decision. Britain suggested a 25,000-ton battleship and France and Italy, 27,500 tons.—Reuter.

Some time ago, when the French air defence estimates were under debate in the Chamber, the rapporteur, Deputy Bernier, supported his advocacy of a greatly augmented expenditure by issuing a report that was 228 pages long, the crucial section containing five pages, where it was alleged that a memorandum of "the Grand German General Staff," commanded by General Reuss, declared that Germany needed an air force of such invincibility that this force would be able to neutralise all the land forces of any enemy.

Had M. Bernier's statement been based on facts, his demand for an expenditure on the scale that it was put would doubtless have seemed justified. But certain military officials, who were better acquainted with the personnel of the German General Staff and knew nothing of "General Reuss," made further enquiries, and it was then found out that the Italian General Douhet had written a book, "The War in the Air," where he described an imaginary war between Germany and France, and naturally invented the figure of "General Reuss," as well as his "Plan" and the "Reich Chancellor" he handed the memorandum to.

BERNIER'S REPORT

M. Bernier, however, in the report submitted to the Chamber which incorporates therein pages 124 to 127 of General Douhet's book, wrote on page 9 and 10 of that book: "In order to show more clearly the German point of view, we consider it expedient to publish herewith extracts from a document of the Grand German General Staff."

"L'Auto" demands that those responsible for this pernicious deception of the public should be called to account. If M. Bernier himself had not read General Douhet's book, he must have been misled by someone in the Ministry of Aviation. But, states the paper, such occurrences damage the good respect France and the French Parliament enjoy.—Trans-Ocean Service.

NORTH ATLANTIC SHIPPING

Threatened Rate War Averted

Paris, Yesterday.

The threatened rate war in Atlantic shipping has probably been averted by the decision understood to have been practically reached at the North Atlantic Conference to make slight increases in the passenger rates on all Atlantic lines.

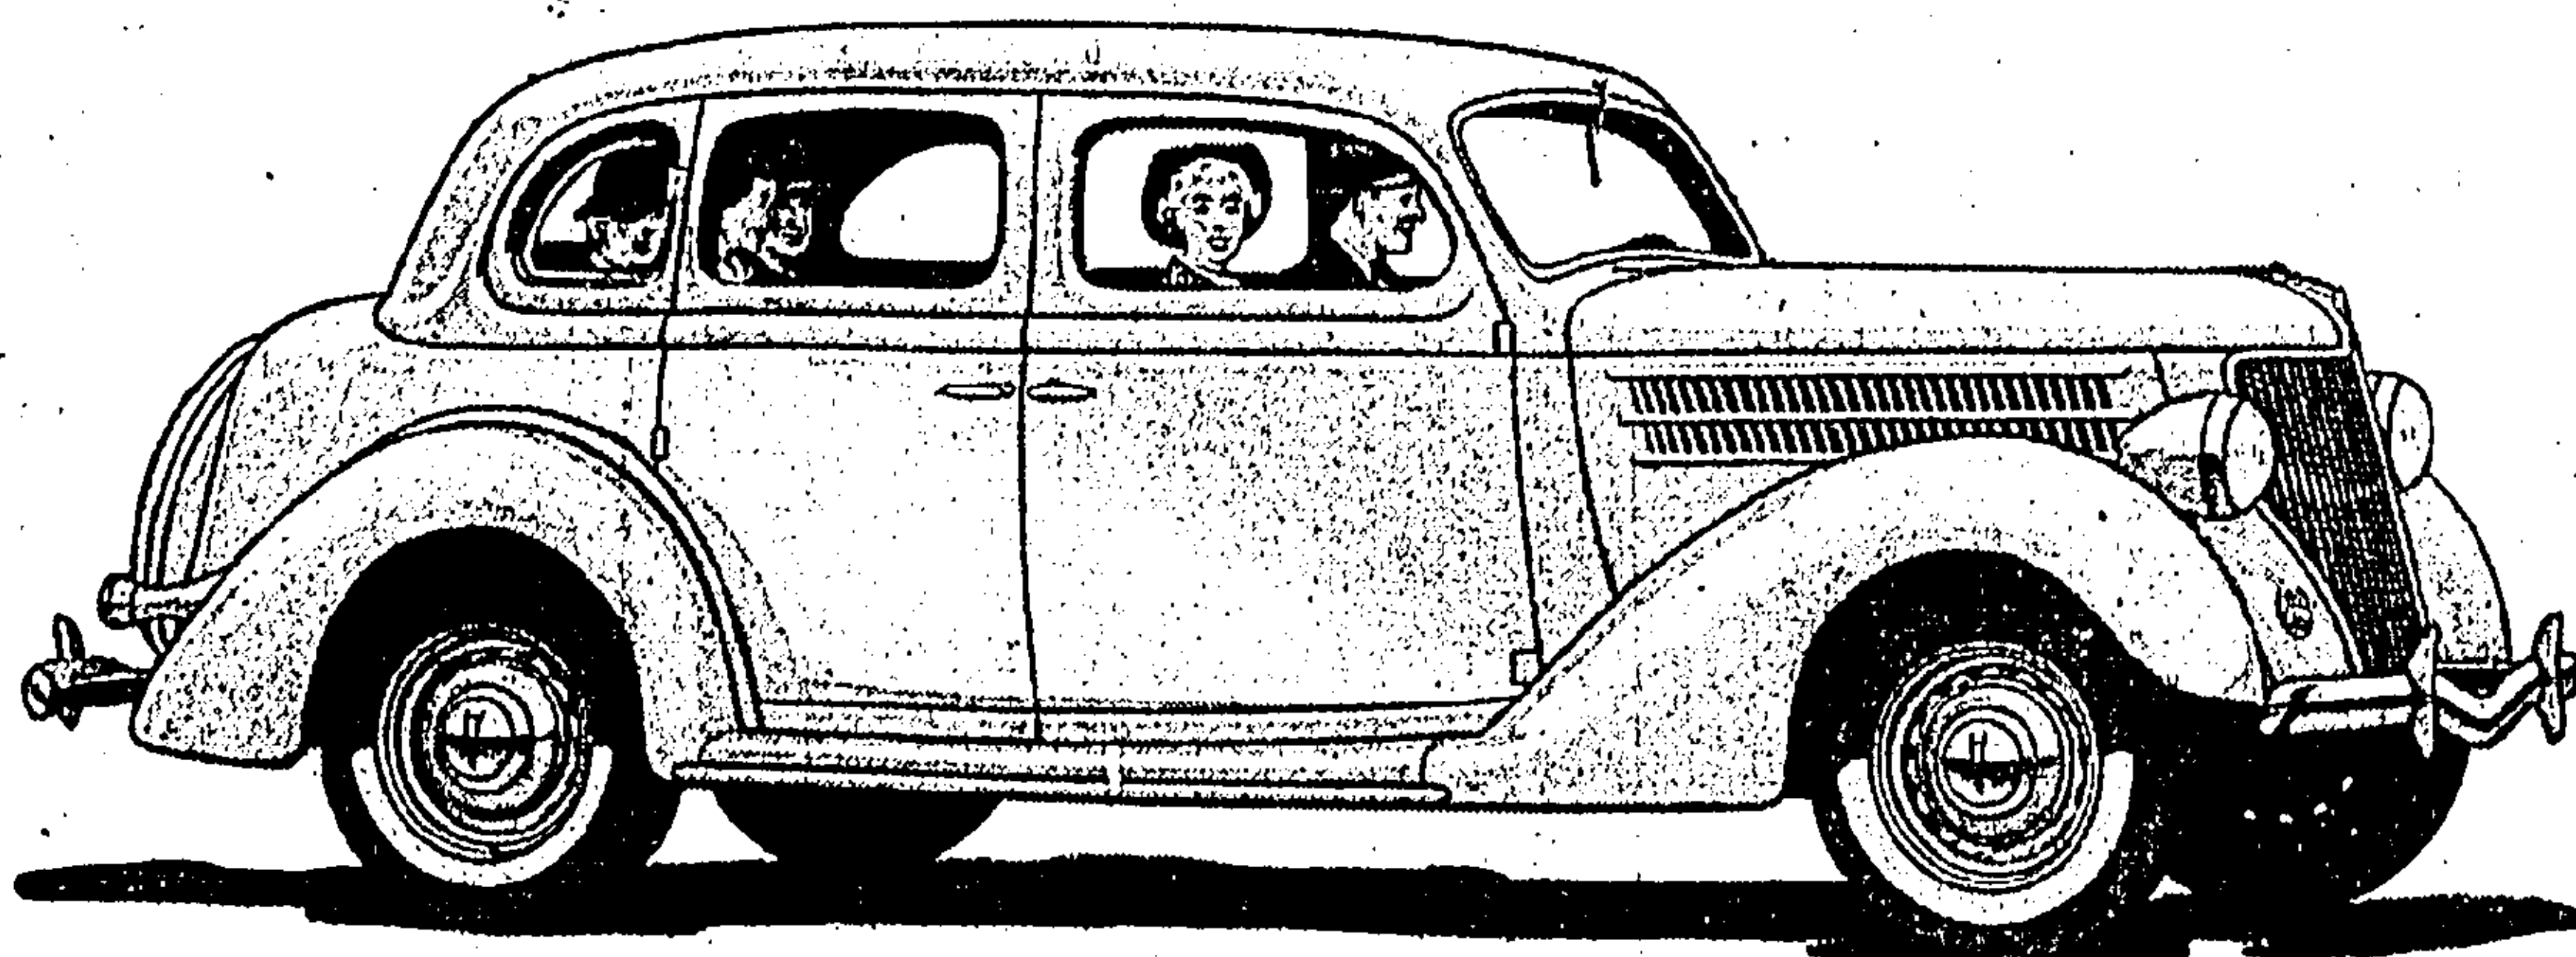

Following the objections by the other lines to the Cunard-White Star liner Queen Mary being rated a "cabin ship," whereby lower fares could be charged than for "first-class ships," the Cunard-White Star tendered its resignation from the conference.

The conference met to consider the matter in London last week and continued this week in Paris. The conference has not yet concluded, but a settlement of the controversy is believed to be in sight, in which event the resignation will be cancelled.—Reuter.

DEATH OF WELSH M. P.

London, Yesterday.—A by-election in the Llanelly division will be necessitated by the death yesterday at the age of 67 of Dr. J. H. Williams, who was returned unopposed as Labour member for the division at the last general election. Dr. Williams had represented Llanelly since 1922 and was Chairman of the Carmarthen-shire County Council.—British Wireless Service.

NOW ON DISPLAY

THE NEW FORD V-8 FOR 1936

Distinguished new beauty of line has been combined with the outstanding comfort, safety and performance that have put the Ford V-8 in a class by itself. The car that led all others in 1935 has been made still better for the new year. It has been proved by the past and improved for the future. The New Ford provides every modern feature, with the assurance of satisfactory service. There are no experiments in it — nothing that has not been tried and tested. This means a great deal to motorists — especially in mechanical construction and in safety. The Ford gives you distinctly better performance because of its V-8 engine — it stands out also because it is such a safe car to drive. The Steel Body, Safety Glass all around and Super-Safety Brakes provide exceptional security. The Ford V-8 for 1936 is the finest, safest, most reliable Ford ever built.

FEATURES OF NEW FORD V-8 FOR 1936

NEW MODERN LINES—New longer hood extends gracefully over the distinctive new radiator grille, accentuating the length of the car. New larger fenders, with a wide flare, contribute to the imposing front-end appearance. New hood louvers. Steel wheels of entirely new design. Rich upholstery. Attractive appointments.

NEW EASIER STEERING—Steering gear ratio increased. Steering gear sector shaft mounted on roller bearings.

NEW GEAR SHIFTING—Easier, quicker, smoother. Shorter distance for gear shift lever to travel. Quiet shifting. Quiet running in all speeds because of silent helical gears.

SUPER-SAFETY BRAKES—Safest, most reliable type of brakes under all driving conditions. Mechanical brakes of the same proved design as have been used for years on the world's finest cars. Extra large braking area. Easy to apply.

WELDED STEEL BODIES—The Ford V-8 has a genuine all-steel body structure—electrically welded for still greater strength.

SAFETY GLASS THROUGHOUT—All Ford body types are equipped with Safety Glass in the windshield and all windows at no extra cost.

V-8 ENGINE—Fine-car power, speed, acceleration and smoothness. The reliability of the Ford V-8 engine has been proved in actual service by more than two million motorists—over a million Ford V-8's purchased in the last year. Figures show that the Ford V-8 is the most economical Ford car ever built. Every year the Ford costs less to run.

NO "BREAKING IN"—The Ford V-8 engine is made to such high standards of precision that it requires no breaking in. You can drive it 60 miles an hour the first day.

EFFICIENT COOLING—The cooling system of the 1936 Ford V-8 circulates 5½ gallons of water through a new, large radiator. Natural thermo-siphon action is assisted by two centrifugal water pumps.

BODIES INSULATED FOR QUIET—The floor, dash and body panels of the Ford V-8 for 1936 are insulated with new materials that absorb and deaden sound. The Ford V-8 engine is quiet. The Ford body is quiet.

CENTRE-POISE RIDING—All passengers ride near the centre of the car—cradled between the soft flexible springs. Exceptional comfort on every type of road. The Ford V-8 gives a front-seat ride to back-seat riders.

UNUSUAL BODY ROOM—Short, compact Ford V-8 engine takes up less space under the hood and permits more of the car's length to be used for passenger comfort.

HONG KONG, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1936

The "Karlsruhe"

FROM year to year the harbour of Hong Kong welcomes the flag of practically every nation that "goes down to the sea in ships" with impartial hospitality, but in many cases the visit is of annual routine, and is taken as a matter of course. The call of the Karlsruhe however, to show the flag on a ship of war for the first time for twenty-two years, is an outstanding event, and calls for special comment. We pride ourselves on being a practical people, and in greeting men of other nations we realise that it is the future and not the past that is best worth our thought. It is a very superficial augury of the future that counts only facts that can be calculated and expressed in figures and leaves unconsidered the currents of sentiment and aspiration. This voyage round the world and the visits to so many of the great ports to show the German flag where it used to be familiar is one of the acts that is most indicative of the German emotions of the day in face of what seems to them a hostile world. We know very well that no high-spirited people will tolerate a position of what looks like subjection for a moment longer than circumstances compel, and that the present regime has got a grip of the German soul because it promises to remove the last traces of a secondary position. The British Government has recently signed a treaty which to us seems fully to recognise the right to naval security, and to some others seems to do so even to excess. However that may be, as the young officers being trained on the Karlsruhe grow up to positions of command they will find that our people have no illusions as to the place that a nation of eighty million industrious and disciplined citizens must occupy among the Great Powers, and that their first object is to put life into the conception of a family of European peoples combining by methods other than war to secure for each complete safety without the terrible burden of armaments designed to outdo every other nation.

Another thing that we quite understand is the German doctrine of "Macht." That theory implies a cynical contempt for explanations or arguments or compromises, teaching that the only efficacious argument is the threat of force on the one side and the fear of it on the other. We deplore that philosophy, because it would develop a world in which the only social relationships were those of master and slave, which is barren of all the elements that go to make a full life of individual well-being and social progress. But again we see that the recent past has given excuse for a desire for national self-assertion, and that the only real cure would be the perception that it was no longer necessary. That can only come when there is a general disposition to deal justly with all the dissatisfied nations, and an equal disposition on their part to help by submitting their cases to some other test than war. All this seems like mere moonshine in the light of the facts that face us all round the world, that all the treaties actually achieved are being repudiated and that everybody is arming as if the general war were coming to-morrow.

Even during the years when conditions were very similar, the years before 1914, when everybody could see the tornado rushing near, there was never any personal animosity between the German and the British Fleets. Admiral Tirpitz and Sir John Fisher used to correspond in terms of unconventional friendship, looking on themselves simply as professional men engaged in the same job, though this quaintly happened to be to blow each other up. Some psychologist of the future who has allowed his studies to stray beyond the beaten and narrow track that passes for psychology at the moment can perhaps explain this strange freak of human nature, but on the first Christmas Day in the trenches orders had to be issued to forbid "fraternisation," and memoirs of old wars reveal that the enemies were frequently more inclined to be generous to each other, in intervals between trying to kill each other, than to the "friends" who had sent them to fight. It does not seem to make sense. The biggest revolution of all will be when some day people recognise that it is not sense.

Hong Kong Personalities

Mr. LAU KING-TSING

This is the seventy-ninth of exclusive series of sketches of leading Colony residents by Mr. A. S. Konyea, the talented Hungarian artist.

Our Personality this week is Mr. Lau King-Tsing, one of the oldest and best-known men in the rice business of the Colony. Mr. Lau, who was born in Hong Kong on October 6, 1887, received his education first at the Sal Yung Pun Government School and afterwards at Queen's College. During his three years at the latter he pursued his regular course of study in the morning and in the afternoon acted as student interpreter at the Secretariat for Chinese Affairs. On leaving Queen's College in 1907 he joined the Government service, first as clerk and interpreter at the Government Disinfecting Station, then at the Central Police Station and subsequently at the Water Police Station, Kowloon and New Territories.

Teaching in Canton

On the conclusion of five years in Government Service Mr. Lau went to Canton as teacher of English in the Canton Military School and various girls' academies and was also employed for some time, on account of his knowledge of English, in the Survey Department of the Board of Conservancy Works of Kwangtung.

The unfavourable exchange eventually decided him to relinquish his Canton appointments and return to Hong Kong, where he entered the rice business, in which he has remained ever since, serving successively with the Cheung On Rice Guild, the Kung On Rice Guild and the Hoi Ngan Rice Guild and then joining the Man Chung Yuen and Kung Yuen rice firm, at that time the largest concern of its kind in the Colony. He was with this firm during the seamen's strike of 1922, when it was part of his duty to superintend the loading and unloading of ships conveying the firm's cargo and he recalls that he had to obtain a permit from the police to carry a revolver, which he displayed ostentatiously in inducing the cargo coolies to continue working.

Shipping Company Manager

Mr. Lau is now Manager of the Hoi Yung Shipping Company, which carries rice for the Nam Tai Long firm, of which he is Secretary. He is also local representative of the Canton office of the Hong Kong Fire Insurance Co., Ltd. and representative of the native department of the Hong Kong Fire Insurance Co., Ltd. and the Canton Insurance Office, Ltd.

He is interested in many works of social betterment. He is Chairman of the Tung Yee Tong Institution, administering a fund for the opening of free schools, of which ten have already been established in Hong Kong and Mongkok. In addition he is Vice-Chairman of the General Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Tung Kun District, Hong Kong, which is also interested in the establishment of free schools and has, indeed, established the largest number of such in the Colony. During the past 16 years these schools have been giving free education to 500 boys annually.

Public-Spirited Citizen

Mr. Lau is also a member of the Committee of the Chung Sing Benevolent Society, which provides indigent persons with warm clothing in winter and makes money grants to other deserving causes. He is also on the Committee of the Confucian Association for the establishment of schools and it was at his sugges-

TRAGIC FIRE IN HOLLAND

SIX PEOPLE ARE BURNT TO DEATH

MEMBERS OF ONE FAMILY

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Amsterdam, Yesterday.

Six people, including four children, perished in the flames and four others suffered grave injuries when a fire last night destroyed one of the mediaeval buildings still used for residential purposes in the oldest quarter of the city, the Oude-zijds Achterburgewal.

The fire, which probably broke out in the basement, soon spread to the staircase, thus cutting off the retreat of the tenants, who vainly tried to escape across the roof. The four persons were seriously injured in jumping off the windows of the upper storeys, while the six others were burnt beyond recognition. These latter were probably the members of one family — father, mother and four children. — Trans-Ocean Service.

CHINA CLIPPER'S TRIP EAST

Expected To Start To-day

The next airmail flights to the Orient of the Pan American Airways Clippers will be made to-day and on February 10, according to dispatches by the Associated Press and the United Press from San Francisco.

Officials of the Pan American Airways base in Manila, however, said on January 31 they were without any information regarding future flights of the China and Philippine Clippers, both of which have made the round trip flight from Alameda, California, to Manila.

New motors have been installed in both the China and Philippine Clippers since their first flights to the Orient, and at the present time they are undergoing flying tests. They have been laid up for over a month, due in part to unfavourable weather.

HU'S FUTURE IN DOUBT

NEGOTIATIONS IN PROGRESS

SHROUDED IN SECRECY

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday. Though fully recovered from his illness caused by high blood pressure, Mr. Hu Han-min has not decided when he will go to Nanking to become Chairman of the Kuomintang C.E.C. Standing Committee.

It is understood that there are some negotiations in progress concerning Mr. Hu's terms of co-operation with General Chiang Kai-shek, President of the Executive Yuan. The nature of these discussions is a guarded secret.

General Chiang is anxious that Mr. Hu should go to Nanking, in view of the elimination of Mr. Wang Ching-wei from politics. The latter is reported to be dying, although Hong Kong rumours stating that he passed away on Thursday are premature.

FIVE YEARS AGO

(Extracts from the Sunday Herald of February 3, 1931).

The Hong Kong Ladies beat the Kowloon Ladies by two clear goals in their Caesar Clark Cup encounter. Miss E. M. Donelan and Miss Ferguson scored the goals, while Miss D. Hunt, Miss A. Fowler and Miss B. Hirst were outstanding for the losers.

The Club caused a sensation by beating the Argyls by 5 goals to 3 in the First Division. Segalen (3), McBride and Wallington scored the goals. The Club have only won two games in the 14 played and both these wins have been against the Argyls, who are in a strong position for the Championship.

A very pretty wedding was solemnised at the Kowloon Church when Miss Thelma R. d'Assumpcao became the bride of Dr. A. P. Gutierrez. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. C. A. Rocha d'Assumpcao, was attended by Miss Cissy Noronha, Miss Lina Noronha, Miss Marie Gutierrez, Miss Hilda Gutierrez and Miss Celeste Gutierrez, as bridesmaids. Master Tong Lopes was the page.

Sir William Hornell, Vice-Chancellor of the Hong Kong University, distributed the prizes at the annual prize-giving of the Diocesan Girls' School. Miss H. D. Sawyer presided and among those present were the Rev. W. Walton Rogers, Professor Foster, Professor M. H. Roffey, Mrs. W. Fold, Miss E. K. Walters, Mr. F. Grose and Mr. S. Churn.

Second honeymoon

an article on LOVE and MARRIAGE by a Consulting Psychiatrist

A glorious night of restful sleep

SLEEP induced by drugs or sedatives is neither natural nor refreshing. 'Ovaltine' is the recognised best "night-cap" all over the world because it ensures sound refreshing sleep in a perfectly natural way.

Of equal importance is the fact that, while you sleep, the food elements so richly supplied by 'Ovaltine' are busily restoring the nerves and creating new energy. You wake refreshed and invigorated.

Enjoy a glorious night's rest every night by drinking delicious 'Ovaltine' before retiring. You will prove—as many thousands have done—that 'Ovaltine' is Tired Nature's Sweet Restorer.

OVALTINE
TONIC FOOD BEVERAGE
GAPB16

WHEN your family starts to grow up, it is time to re-organise your life.

You will have to start weaning yourself from your children, and they from you.

Part of the preparation of adolescents for maturity is this weaning of them from the parents' home; the other part is the fixing of a healthy interest in the opposite sex.

Your children are in the storm and stress period of their lives. You must bear with them and be chary of depriving them of the right to make—and profit by—their own mistakes.

Shortly they will marry and take their lives into their hands.

You will have the rest of your life to yourself, to do what you choose with.

New Outlets

This may be a difficult time for the mother who is about to lose her job. The father is occupied with his work and less likely to be affected. Now that her children are needing her less and soon will not need her at all, she has more and more energy and love which seeks an outlet. If it cannot find a constructive outlet, it will find a destructive one; in the form of neurosis or malicious gossiping, or meddling busybodyness.

She must plan to extend her interests, and even to find a new career; it may be social work, politics, a small business, a hobby that pays.

Probably one of the most important changes in the next few years will be the increasing number of middle-aged women, who, having brought up a family, will take the greater opportunities now available of devoting the rest of their useful lives to a career or a serious hobby.

Happier in Middle-Age

Before 40 there is more striving than achievement in love, more experimenting than knowledge, more conflict than solution, more suffering than enjoyment. When all is weighed up, the sum-total of real joy can be greater after 40.

There is nothing to prevent a man and woman who have brought up their family beginning again a love that may become more and more worthwhile and intense instead of fading into tolerant indifference.

Wisely Spent Leisure

To each partner at this period is given an opportunity of cultivating a life of richer individuality; in filling the home with new resources for satisfaction, in acquiring new physical and mental skills, in the wiser use of the increasing amount of leisure.

The home can be reformed gradually. It is to be judged not by the richness of its appointments, but by its richness in resources for giving fresh satisfactions.

You will have time slowly to accumulate a little library to hold all the books you never had time to read; you may collect gramophone records of the music you never could listen to in quietude and with appreciation. You will have time to build yourself a workshop or a studio—it needn't be a room, a corner will do—where you can experiment with new skills, try out new pleasures as well as the old ones.

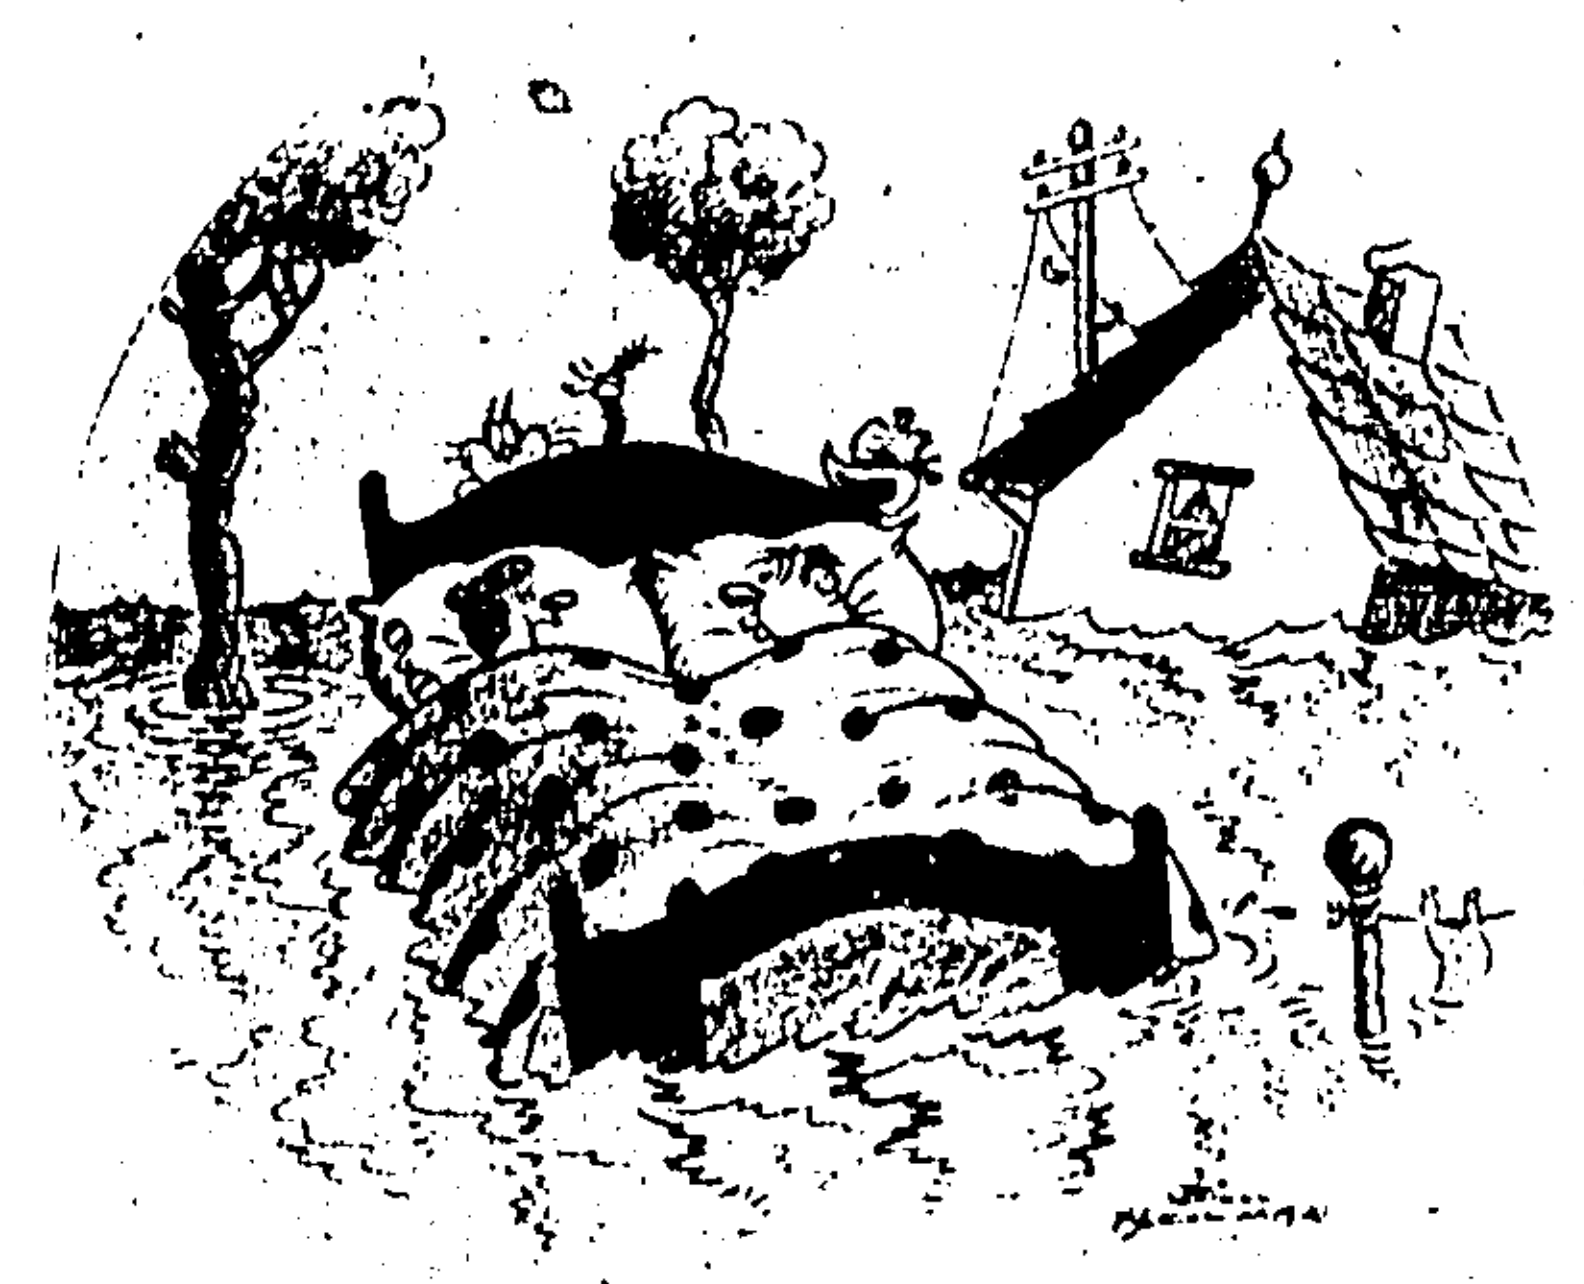

Fresh Conquests

You can start your second honeymoon with the knowledge that you have another life to live, fresh worlds to conquer, another example to set your children, fresh joys to bring to each other.

HAS SHE MR. BOVRIL TO-DAY?

Mr. Chester Bennett, an American and one of those responsible for the formation of the Fung Wong Photoplays Ltd., is now working on the production of several films—his most recent one met with great success in local Chinese theatres.

Our personality this week is "Barney," the 16-year-old cat owned by Mrs. Harry Woods of Kowloon. He was picked up in the street a starving stray in January, 1920.

Almost in Confidence

Mrs. Sorby Goes On Holiday

MRS. V. Sorby sailed yesterday on the Chitral with her lovely young daughter Marygold. She is taking Marygold to school in England. At the same time she will be seeing her two sons; the younger is still at school, while the elder has already begun his studies at Cambridge University.

Mrs. Sorby will be enjoying a long holiday in England. From one point of view, however, she won't be sorry to return to Hong Kong when it is over, as she is one of those lucky few who not only do not mind, but claim that on the whole they actually enjoy our Hong Kong weather.

Headmistress On Leave

MISS Newsholme, the Headmistress of the Peak School, has just left for England on leave. She was due to leave some time ago but unhappily she became ill when the time came. We hope that the sea-trip will help her to get quite strong again so that by the time she gets home she will be ready to enjoy all there is to enjoy on a holiday in England.

Miss Skinner Returning

ALL who know Miss H. F. Skinner, M.B.E., will be glad to hear that she is returning to the Colony on holiday. She is on her way now, but first she is visiting India and then Java, so that the exact date of her arrival is still uncertain.

Miss Skinner has been living in England for the past two years, but before she retired she was the Headmistress of Belkiss Public School. It is pleasant to think that Hong Kong still seems to hold attractions even for those who left without thought of ever returning.

Mrs. Adams Coming Back

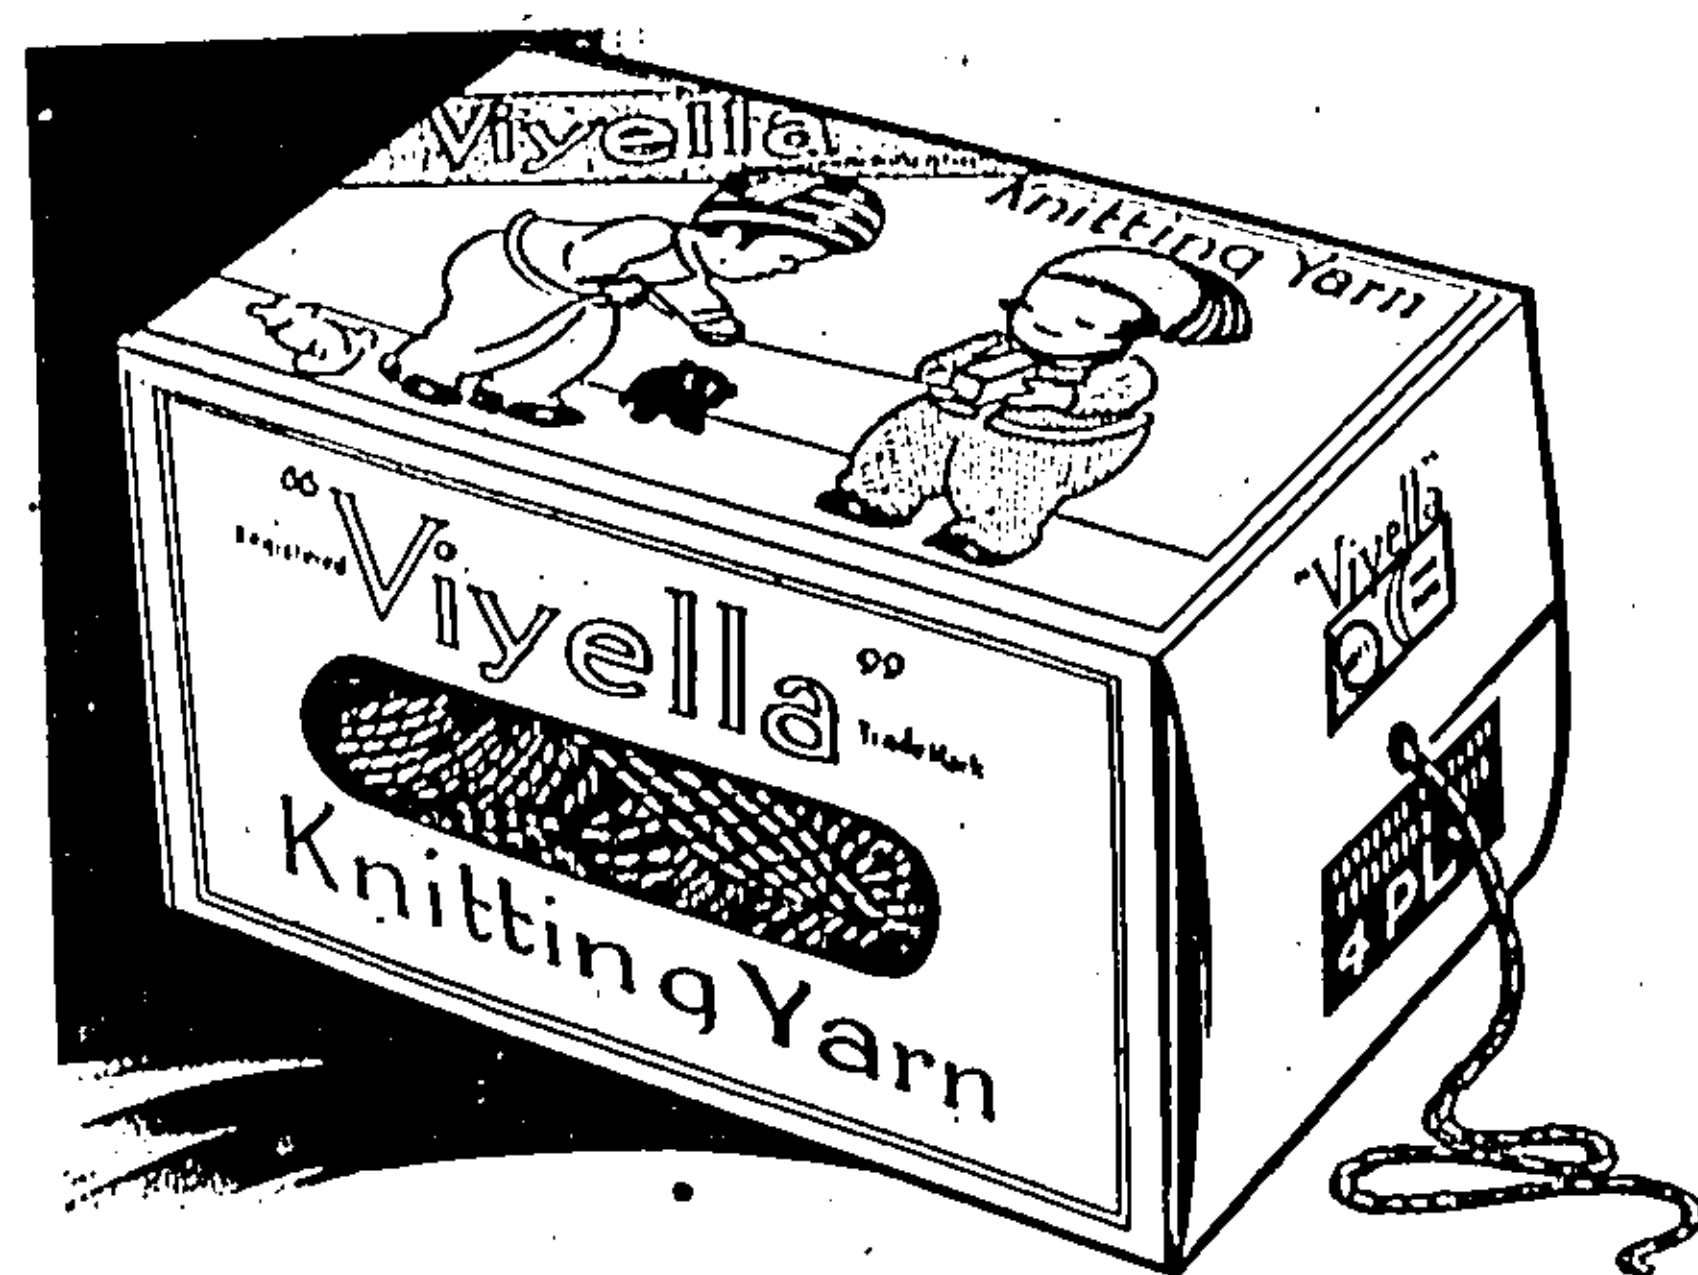

MRS. G. Adams, another former Hong Kong teacher, is also returning to the Colony—but this time, happily, it is not only for a holiday. After a short while in Shanghai, Mr. Adams is returning to the Hong Kong branch of Butterfield and Swire.

Congratulations Mr. Schuldt

MR. G. Schuldt had a cable from Germany two weeks ago telling him that he is now the father of a little girl. He already has a young son, so now, he says, the family is complete! Hartwig, the little boy, incidentally, must have enjoyed his second birthday in Berlin not many weeks ago.

Mrs. Schuldt, who stayed behind when their leave was over, is spending the summer with her mother in Berlin and will be returning to Hong Kong with the two children in October.

MRS. Braine-Hartnell will be passing through the Colony very soon. Her husband, who is spoken of as a great lover of poetry, was formerly a lecturer at the University here. He is now at the Bangkok University.

About TOWN

AS the date of the Spring Meeting at Happy Valley draws near, the long lists of clocked times begin to attract attention in the papers and to be studied with a concentrated attention which is quite unintelligible to the "safety first" section of the population. Bad times ought to frighten people off from the risky adventure of "buying a chance", but it is the plain fact that they do nothing of the sort. The contemplation of a ledger that discloses but a "beggarly array of empty columns," or worse, leads to an impulse to give opportunity to some other activity that gives promise of a result not so painfully capable of accurate deduction. Most probably the "clock" is grossly misleading, for it does not allow for that little spark of extra courage that will put one horse's head just in front of another, but on the whole a mildly regulated tote, if we allow for the percentage that goes to the pockets of the mafios and the trainers and so on, does not represent an excessive extravagance for an afternoon's relief from the contemplation of the dismal ledger.

Gambling Legislation

THE beginning of the season however has, as has frequently happened before, led to some activity on the part of our legislators, who are always anxious to protect us from our own weaknesses. What exactly is the amount of betting in Hong Kong on English races and on the professional football matches can only be a matter of opinion, and that is where the crux of the legislative problem of regulation comes in. It is a mere truism to say that neither in England nor anywhere else has any satisfactory theory been discovered that will prevent excess without interfering unduly with the freedom of action that people feel ought to be left to them by the State. The new

"Betting Duty Amendment Ordinance" is in its very form an acknowledgment of the hazardous methods applied to this subject. It is nominally one of a series of Ordinances of 1931, 1933, and 1934, dealing with the collection of revenue, but really designed to regulate an ingrained habit of mankind; and the new provisions are all in the form of verbal changes in the sections of previous Ordinances, so disconnected that nobody reading them alone could form any opinion of what they are all about. Its object is to suppress betting in the street — of which there is very little sign in Hong Kong — and in premises that are only hired for that express purpose. The definition of the purpose in the third subsection of the third section by its wording indicates how protean may be the forms adopted.

Definition Of Taboo Premises

THE Ordinance defines the forbidden premises as those "for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto or for the purpose of any money or valuable thing being received as or for the consideration for any assurance, undertaking, or agreement, express or implied, to pay or give thereafter any money or valuable thing on any event or contingency of or relating to any horse race, or pony race, fight, game, sport or exercise, or as or for the consideration for securing the paying or giving any money or valuable thing on any such event or contingency". The definition is of course based on experience gained elsewhere of all manner of methods of evasion, and will well repay analysis which would be beyond our space, but the "valuable thing" reminds one of the days when the moneylender used nominally to sell a worthless clock or ornament and claim that he had given "consideration". Then there is the whole amusing mass of recondite learning as to the definition of a "public place", which excluded betting rings and included the raising of a red umbrella. In this section of restrictive measures the outstanding fact is that it is infinitely better for the public and easier for control that there should be definite places of resort for those who intend to bet, than that there should be a kind of cat-and-mouse game with the police which gives every opportunity to the crook. The pitfalls of drafting are evident from the very first words, "for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto", which opens a vista of difficult decisions whether a person who resorts to a place for some other colourable excuse, such as a drink, or even a meal — which has been held to be satisfied by the purchase of a dry biscuit that found its way into a pocket — may do so with impunity.

Chance And Foresight

THESE remarks are not of course intended to criticise the new Ordinance for failing to do what no draftsman has ever succeeded in doing — to make watertight regulations that will show a clear line between chance and calculation or business. In the great cotton markets in the world, Liverpool and Manchester, it is very rare for manufacturers to buy any large quantity of "spot" cotton. They buy for delivery at three or six months date from a broker who has not got any cotton on hand, and the transaction is either settled by "taking up" the goods, or by a cheque for the "difference". And men who are constantly gambling for thousands of pounds have no inclination to bet for shillings. The only logical principle seems to be to avoid class legislation by means of the general methods of regulation, and the enforcement of contracts.

R.U.R. Ladies' Hockey Club

FEW know that the Ladies of the Royal Ulster Rifles have quite a good hockey team and that they have been putting in some practice recently. The Ladies' Hockey Club of the Battalion was started while they were stationed at Alexandria and last year won five of the six games they played, finishing up with a goal average of 20 goals for and 3 against!

Mrs. Campbell's Initiative

I understand that it was through the enthusiasm and keenness of Mrs. Campbell, wife of Captain Campbell, Officer Commanding "B" Company, that the Ladies' hockey team came into being and the support received was most encouraging.

MRS. KERR, wife of C.Q.M.S.

Kerr, the battalion hockey pivot, the Misses E. and W. Hamon, daughters of Lieut. C. D. Hamon, are among a few of the keen lady players, while the following turned out to play regularly while in Egypt—Mrs. Toop, Mrs. Dornay, Mrs. Ratcliffe, Mrs. Holo, Mrs. Hayden, Mrs. Elwood, Mrs. Kerr, Mrs. Campbell, Miss E. Hamon, Miss W. Hamon, Mrs. Noel, Mrs. Gordon, Mrs. Ashton, Mrs. Lilley, Mrs. McNerlan, Mrs. Todd, Mrs. Lindsay, Mrs. Dixon, Mrs. Dorman, Miss P. Doran, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Osborne and Mrs. Lawrence.

Of these only Mrs. Toop is not at present in Hong Kong and there is little doubt that the next hockey season will find the Rifles' Ladies participating in the Caer Clark and Brown Cup games, and perhaps supplying us with some Interporters.

Local Shooting Expedition

A party of six Portuguese sportsmen, under the leadership of H. J. Silva, crossed the frontier into Chinese territory recently on a shooting expedition and had the satisfaction of returning with a "bag" of about 150 birds between them.

H.K.I.A.S.A.'s Last Meeting

THE Hong Kong International Amateur Swimming Association will officially close next week with the final meeting of the three remaining Clubs, the European Y.M.C.A., the Royal Navy and the H.K. University.

Japanese Olympic Aces

THE Japanese Olympic contingent of over 350 athletes will travel to the Berlin Olympic Games by a specially chartered vessel which is likely to touch at the Colony during April.

Colony Rugby Selectors

THE Rugby Selection Committee to select the Colony side to meet the New Zealand Universities' touring side on February 21 comprises Col. H. C. Harrison, a former English International, Dr. J. A. R. Selby, an ex-Scottish International, and Comdr. O. Orr-Ewing, a former Navy "cap."

Catholic Union's Success

THE final of the Manila Tournament, an annual affair between the Recreo, Club Lusitano, Catholic Union Club and Liga Portuguesa, was played at the Club Lusitano last week and resulted in a win for the fourth year in succession for the Catholic Union.

Whelan Out of Luck

L/CPL. WHELAN, of the Royal Ulster Rifles, featherweight champion of Egypt in 1933, 1934, and 1935, and Inter-Service champion in 1933 and 1935 will not have much chance of displaying his skill in the Colony this year, for the Hong Kong Boxing Association does not look like staging a boxing tournament.

R. C. R. "Banner" Competition

A very enjoyable soccer game should be witnessed when the officers and the sergeants of the Royal Ulster Rifles meet in their "Banner" Competition. The last game played in Egypt was won by the Sergeants by 3 goals to 1. Major Wilkins played a great game at right-back for the Officers on that occasion.

Officers' Hockey Win

THE Officers beat the Sergeants by the odd goal in three, for the first time in seven years, in the last hockey game. Captain Crookshank and Lieut. Harris scored for the Officers, while the Sergeants' only goal was netted by C.Q.M.S. Kerr.

Both Harris and Kerr are regular members of the battalion hockey team, Kerr being the pivot and Lieut. Harris, the inside-left.

By the Judge

Local Sportsmen To See Games

R. B. WOOD, a member of the European Y.M.C.A. Swimming section, is leaving the Colony for home on leave in the first week of March. He intends to visit the Berlin Olympic Games and will probably travel with two other intending sightseers in G. H. Fowler and W. F. Kerr, who are also leaving the Colony on leave within the next three weeks.

Sunday League Bears Fruit

THE Sunday Cricket League at the Indian Recreation Club is at last having the desired effect in that more members who previously were not interested actively in cricket are at last taking to the game. The latest converts are A. R. Dallah, the lawn bowler, and Omar Hussein, one of their keenest tennis members.

Goldman To Retire?

L. GOLDMAN, holder of the Colony Open Mixed Doubles Lawn Tennis championship for the past two seasons, is seriously contemplating retiring from competitive tennis and will probably be making his last appearance in the Colony Open Doubles Championship, in which he will be partnered by T. A. Pearce.

SPORT PERSONALITIES XI

H. D. RUMJAHN, the Interport tennis player and joint holder of the Colony Doubles Championship for the last 11 years, first learned how to play tennis from the late Mr. R. J. Birbeck, who was the Headmaster of the Ellis Kadorie Indian School when "H. D." was there in 1916. He was such a keen pupil that often he would give up his tuition and spend the hour on the court instead. Just about that time the now defunct Victoria British School had a tennis team of its own and matches were arranged between the two schools in order to give the boys "match experience."

From the very outset Rumjahn showed a partiality for tennis and when the school courts were not available during the holidays he would play on the cement courts of the Y.M.C.A., which were only a stone's throw from his house.

When the Indian Recreation Club was founded in 1919, "H. D." was one of those who made almost constant use of the tennis courts, so much so that he was given a place in the "B" team in 1920, being promoted to the "A" the following year. He has played for the I.R.C. first team ever since.

It was in 1921 that Rumjahn first participated in the Colony championships and he had the distinction of reaching the final of the open doubles with his cousin, Omar Rumjahn. Unfortunately, however, they had to concede a walk-over due to the fact that he had a bad foot. A few months later he secured Interport recognition, and on his return from Shanghai (where Hong Kong were then) he again partnered Omar in the doubles and won. In 1923 Omar left the Colony for Tientsin and H. D. joined forces with S. A. Rumjahn, another cousin. What has happened since then is history, for they have not yet been dethroned as doubles champions!

Rumjahn has played in four Interports altogether and has, in addition, reached the semi-finals of the open singles championship on several occasions. He won the Indian Recreation Club championship in 1926, while he has also annexed the Craigengower Cricket Club title more than once. With Mrs. C. C. Chiu as his partner he has reached the final of the open mixed doubles championship twice, but on each occasion was beaten by L. Goldman and Miss R. Hancock.

Up to a few years ago he also played cricket for the Indian Recreation Club senior eleven, being a very steady batsman in addition to being one of their most reliable fielders. At football, too, he has met with considerable success, and while at school represented St. Joseph's College at athletics.

WEDDING AT CATHEDRAL

Stewart — Everall

LARGE GATHERING PRESENT

A very pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at St. John's Cathedral, the Rev. H. W. Baines officiating, between Mr. George Anthony Stewart, son of the late Colonel J. A. Stewart and Mrs. Stewart, of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, and Miss Joy Everall, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Everall, of Chislehurst, Kent, and late of Shanghai.

The bride looked lovely in a gown of ivory French lace over anath, with bishop's sleeves and a short, full train, pearl girdle and a spray of orange blossoms at the neck. She wore a tulle veil held in place by a coronet of pearls, and carried a bouquet of white sweetpeas and lily of the valley.

The bride was attended by Miss Eve O'Hagan and Miss Audrey Steele as bridesmaids, both of whom looked charming in apple green French crepe, flecked with gold, and pale gold caps. The two small bridesmaids were the Misses Pauline and Susan Owen-Hughes, who wore apple green Kato Greenaway dresses, with pale yellow flowers in their hair. The grown-up bridesmaids carried bouquets of Shirley poppies and the tiny girls held posies of yellow flowers.

The bride was given away by Mr. V. M. Grayburn, Chief Manager of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, and Mr. G. S. Dunkley, also of the bank's staff, was Best Man. The Groomsmen were Messrs. T. A. Pearce, P. H. Scoones and A. H. R. Butcher.

After the wedding a largely-attended reception was held at the Bank Mans in the new Hong Kong Bank building, where the healths of the happy couple were enthusiastically drunk.

The honeymoon is being spent in the Philippine Islands.

The bride's going-away dress was green-blue in colour, with a three-quarter-length coat with subtle collar and accessories to tone.

QUIET WEDDING AT CATHEDRAL

Mrs. Felix Joseph, who wore a handsome gown of turquoise crepe marocaine, was matron of honour; the duties of best man were performed by Mr. A. V. Kinchin, manager of the Jockey Club stables; and little Miss Wendy Joseph, in pink georgette and carrying a posy of roses and violets, was the flower-girl.

Mr. Lindsay Lafford, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., presided at the organ.

The bride, who was given away by Mr. Felix Joseph, looked charming in amber satin. Her bouquet was of African daisies to tone with her dress.

A reception was held after the ceremony at "Enidville," Repulse Bay, the residence of Mr. Felix Joseph, after which the happy couple left for Fanling, where the honeymoon is to be spent. The bride's travelling dress was a suit of brown crepe marocaine.

MORE RIOTS IN SYRIA

Seven Deaths At Hama

RICH QUARTERS LOOTED

Beirut, Yesterday.

A recrudescence of the Nationalist trouble in Syria has resulted in seven deaths at Hama. About 35 members of the Government forces were injured when they were called to cope with a crowd of students and rowdies who, fired by incendiary speeches, stoned the public buildings and started looting the rich quarters. The bazaars in all the chief towns are closed.—Reuter.

NEW FORD V-8 CARS

Wallace Harper's Display

A vast improvement in shape, comfort, safety and performance, was seen yesterday at a display of the various models of the new Ford V-8 for 1936, given by the local agents, Messrs. Wallace Harper, in their show rooms at No. 223, Nathan Road.

The cars are constructed with genuine all-steel bodies, which are electrically welded for providing still greater strength, and are also equipped with safety glass throughout.

In every respect the new cars are appreciably better than those of last year. Steering has been made much easier, as the steering gear sector shaft is mounted on ball bearings, and the shifting of gears is also much easier, faster and smoother.

According to an official of the Company, the War Office have favoured the Company with an order of two cars of the open touring type, which are to be used by the Royal Engineers.

The display will again be open again to-day until 9 p.m.

The bride looked charming as she entered the church on the arm of her uncle, Mr. H. H. Remedios, by whom she was given away. Mr. A. F. B. Silva-Netto and Mr. A. W. da Roza were the groomsmen.

After the wedding a reception was held at the home of the newly-wedded pair, at which a large number of relatives and friends were present.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Council's Work In Past Week

INTERNATIONAL COURT STATUTE

Geneva, Yesterday.

At the recent meeting of the League Council the Secretary-General of the League officially announced the coming into force of the protocol of September 14, 1929, concerning the revision of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice. Amendments to this Statute provide for the abolition of Deputy Judges.

The Court now consists of 15 members in all. Stricter conditions are contemplated regarding the incompatibility of other duties for judges, who are prohibited not only from exercising political or administrative functions but may not engage in any other occupation of a professional nature. The system of sessions, convened when necessary, is replaced by the principle of a Court permanently in session except during judicial vacations. Even then it may be summoned urgently. The Chamber of Summary Procedure will henceforth be composed of five members instead of three.

Indigent Foreigners

The committee of experts for the assistance of indigent foreigners has just ended its second session. It considered observations received on the revised draft for a multilateral convention on the assistance of indigent foreigners, and also the question of a model bilateral treaty for the same purpose to be concluded by Governments not disposed to adopt the general convention. It also took steps for an enquiry into certain matters concerning the existing methods of assistance to indigent foreigners now in force.

ILLEGAL USE OF A CAR

Ulster Rifleman Fined

Rifleman Edward Smith of the Royal Ulster Rifles again appeared before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistrate's Court yesterday, charged with being found in the Peak Hotel Garage at 11.15 p.m. on Sunday, February 2, for an unlawful purpose, with driving private car No. 2852 belonging to Mr. P. S. Cassidy without permission and will driving the car without a licence.

The defendant was found guilty on all charges and was fined a total of $35 on the three charges.

Evidence was given by an Indian Constable, a car cleaner at the garage and by Sub-Inspector McEwan, in which it was revealed that the car had only been moved a few feet and that only slight damage had been done to the bumper.

It was also stated that defendant had been drinking, but that he was able to walk well and spoke distinctly.

POLITICS IN EUROPE

Conversations In Paris

AUSTRIA AND RESTORATION OF MONARCHY

Paris, Yesterday.

The meetings held by the representatives of the various Powers during the last few days have ended. There have been many contradictory statements as to the objects of the conversations, but it is understood that the main points of the talk have been the questions of Austria and Bulgaria.

Part of the conversations was persuasion of Bulgaria to join the Little Entente, while the question of Austria was slightly complicated by her desire to restore the monarchy eventually, which is objected to by the Little Entente.

There has been some anxiety on the part of Austria concerning her independence, for which she had mostly relied on Italy for support, but a result of the Paris conversations there may be closer collaboration between Austria and France and the Little Entente.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

No tender will be received, unless the person tendering produces a receipt to the effect that he has deposited in the Colonial Treasury the sum of $30 as a pledge of the bona fides of his offer, which sum shall be forfeited to the Crown if such person fails or refuses to carry out his tender, should the tender be accepted.

Further particulars and forms of tender may be had at the Police Headquarters.

VERY ENJOYABLE EVENING

German Sailors At R.E.O.C.A. Dana

A very enjoyable evening was spent by all those who attended the Royal Engineers' Old Comrades' Association dance at the China Fleet Club last evening when the dance band of the Royal Ulster Rifles gave a special programme of "old favourites."

Special colour was lent to the occasion by the presence of members of the crew of the German cruiser Kurland, who were the guests of the Association.

Another dance will be held next Saturday, when the crew of the Kurland will again be invited to attend.

ITALIANS ALLEGED SHORT OF FOOD

37 ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS ARRIVE AT ADDIS ABABA

NIGHT RAIDS ON TRANSPORTS IN NEGELLI AREA

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Addis Ababa, Yesterday.

Continued heavy rainfall is making operations on a large scale nearly impossible, according to the latest despatches. On the southern front, however, continued guerilla warfare is in progress, being carried out by isolated detachments of Ras Desta's troops, directed, under cover of the night, against Italian food and ammunition transports on the Negelli sector.

Owing to the length of the lines of communication these attacks are apparently meeting with success, it being asserted that the Italian troops at the front are already short of food.

The Italians take advantage of every dry interval to carry out aerial bombing attacks, dropping large quantities of bombs, but achieving apparently slight damage.

Some 37 anti-aircraft guns of Swiss manufacture have just arrived in the Abyssinian capital. These modern weapons have a calibre of 3.7 cm. and it is hoped that they will have the effect of reducing the Italian superiority regarding mechanised armaments.

Rome: The Italian Ambassador to London, Signor Grandi, was received in audience by Signor Mussolini yesterday, when he submitted an exhaustive report on the political situation and his own activities in London.

Signor Grandi then handed the Duce a gift of gold to the value of more than 1,000,000 lire, being the contribution towards the fight against economic sanctions on the part of the Italians living in Great Britain.

SINGER'S GIFT OF GOLD Milan: A patriotic deed was performed by the well-known Italian singer Toti China, who, in the famous Milan Scala during the interval, handed a Fascist representative 15 pounds of gold in bars and ornaments as a sacrifice to help the country in its struggle against economic sanctions. The majority of these golden articles had been handed to him as tokens of respect during his operatic career.

LITTLE TO REPORT Rome: According to the latest report, contained in the official War Bulletin, No. 117, issued yesterday, Marshal Badoglio reports that there is nothing notable to report from either front.—Trans-Ocean Service.

PRIVATE BILLS IN COMMONS

Successful Members In Ballot

FORMAL FIRST READINGS

At the beginning of public business in the House of Commons yesterday 27 members who were successful in the ballot of private members for the right to present bills introduced bills which were formally read for the first time.

It is unlikely that more than eight of these will have an opportunity to move the second reading of their bills before the end of the session.

On Friday next Admiral Sir Murray Sueter, Conservative member for Hereford, will move the second reading of a bill to subordinate the three fighting services to the Ministry of Defence.

A fortnight later a Labour member, another of the eight, will move the second reading of a bill to amend the law relating to workmen's compensation. Private members' bills rarely reach the statute book unless they are taken over by the Government.

Mr. A. P. Herbert, the well-known novelist and humorist, whose return as an Independent Conservative Member for Oxford University was one of the outstanding results at the general election, secured a place in the ballot but too far down to have a hope of securing a second reading for the bills which he introduced yesterday relating to marriage, divorce, licensing and gambling. In connection with which subjects he has a been prominent advocate of reforms for many years.—British Wireless Service.

It is understood that as a result of negotiations between Admiral Wada and General Tada, measures have been reached for effecting closer connection between the Japanese military and naval forces in North China.—Central News Agency.

APANESE NAVAL MOVEMENTS

The Japanese cruiser Idzumo returned from exercises at Blas Bay on Friday, and the Japanese gunboat Saga, with Admiral Oikawa on board, also returned from Canton on Friday. The two vessels met outside Green Island and the Admiral transferred his flag to the Idzumo, by which vessel he then sailed, probably for Formosa.

NEW REGIME IN INDIA

House Discusses Two Orders

FIRST STEPS TAKEN

London, Yesterday.

The House of Commons yesterday discussed two orders, the first of a series to be made under the Government of India Act. The two orders, taken together, mark the final stages in the establishment of the Provinces of Sind and Orissa with constitutions for an interim period.

In the course of his speech moving that the House approve the orders the Under-Secretary for India, Mr. R. A. Butler, said that the Secretary for India, Lord Zetland, was well satisfied with the progress which was being made with the work preliminary to bringing the new Indian Constitution into operation. Providing the forthcoming report of Sir Otto Niemeyer showed that there was no financial obstacle the Secretary for India hoped to be able before the summer recess to ask Parliament to consider bringing Part 3 of the Government of India Act reforming the Provincial constitutions, into operation early in 1937.—British Wireless Service.

ADMIRAL'S VISIT TO TIENTSIN

Japanese Officer Entertained

Peking, Yesterday.

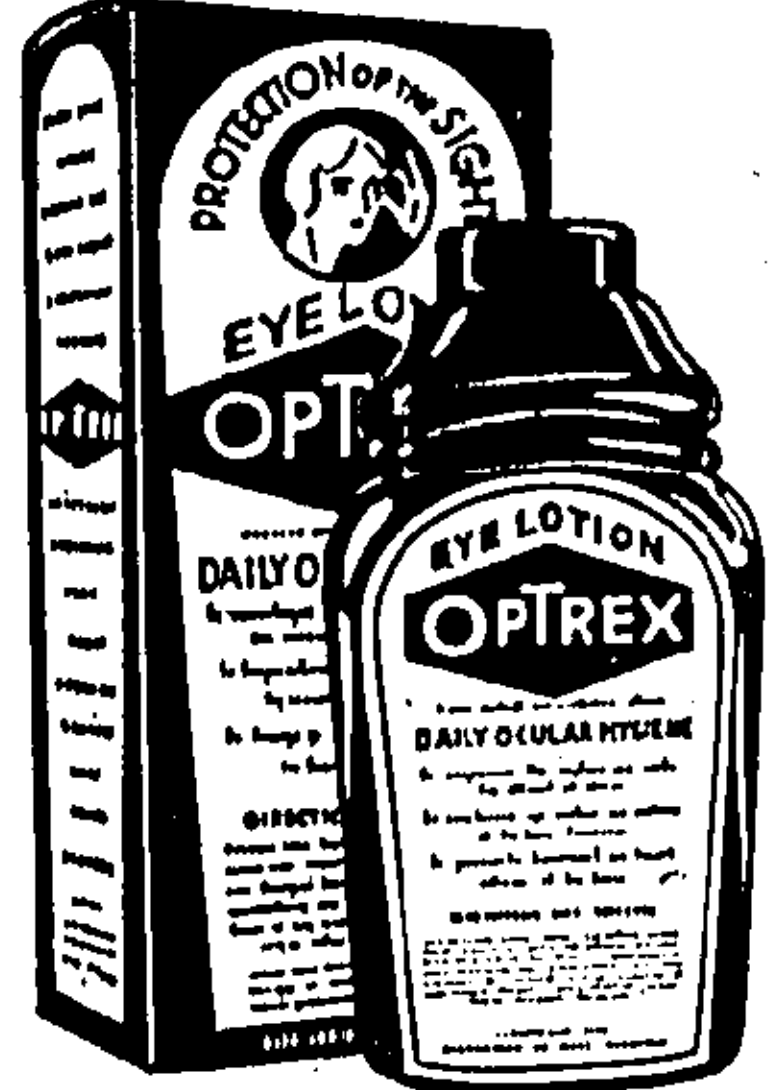

Rear-Admiral H. Wada, Commander of the Japanese Naval Detachment at Port Arthur, arrived here at 11 o'clock yesterday morning from Tientsin by train.

Shortly after his arrival, he called on General Chin Teh-chin, who later gave a dinner party in his honour at the Summer Palace, to which many high Chinese and Japanese officials were also invited.

It is understood that as a result of negotiations between Admiral Wada and General Tada, measures have been reached for effecting closer connection between the Japanese military and naval forces in North China.—Central News Agency.

NEW O.S.K. WHARF NEARLY READY

Most Up-To-Date In Colony

OVER $300,000 SPENT

Situated on the west of the vehicle ferry wharf, Hong Kong's most up-to-date wharf will be completed in a fortnight's time.

The old O.S.K. wharf was demolished in June last, and the owners have since engaged Messrs. Yee Lee to construct the new one, which is now nearing completion. Messrs. Leigh and Orange are the consulting engineers.

The new wharf will be 50 feet longer than the old one, which was only 300 feet, while the width, which was formerly 30 feet, will be increased by 10 feet. Gray system steel piles, purchased from Belgium, have been used in its construction.

At each end of the wharf a searchlight will be installed for night work and for lessening the dangers of night berthing.

Up-To-Date Offices
There will also be a modern two-storeyed concrete building to be utilised as offices for tally clerks, company's officials and watchmen.

Besides this building, a 100-foot platform, about 12 feet in height, is at present being built in the middle of the wharf. Passengers disembarking will first proceed along the gangway on to the platform and then down a staircase on to the wharf.

When completed this wharf will be the most up-to-date on the island. According to an official of the O.S.K., the sum spent in construction has already exceeded $300,000.

CURIOS GOING FOR A SONG

Bargains At Komor's Auctions.

BUYERS ACQUIRING ART OBJECTS CHEAPLY

One of the old timers and best known firms, Messrs. Komor and Komor, having decided last week to close down their retail store, are placing about $50,000 worth of objects d'art at public auction. Mr. Komor informs us that the attendance up to now has been excellent, but the bidding and the prices obtained almost ridiculous. A year ago, when conditions were better in Hong Kong, the articles would have brought five times the present amounts.

Some of the finest "celadon" vases, worth $250, sold for $12 at the auction. Lacquer ware, tea-sets and generally useful articles brought fair prices and almost covered their cost, but curios and valuable old pieces went for a song.

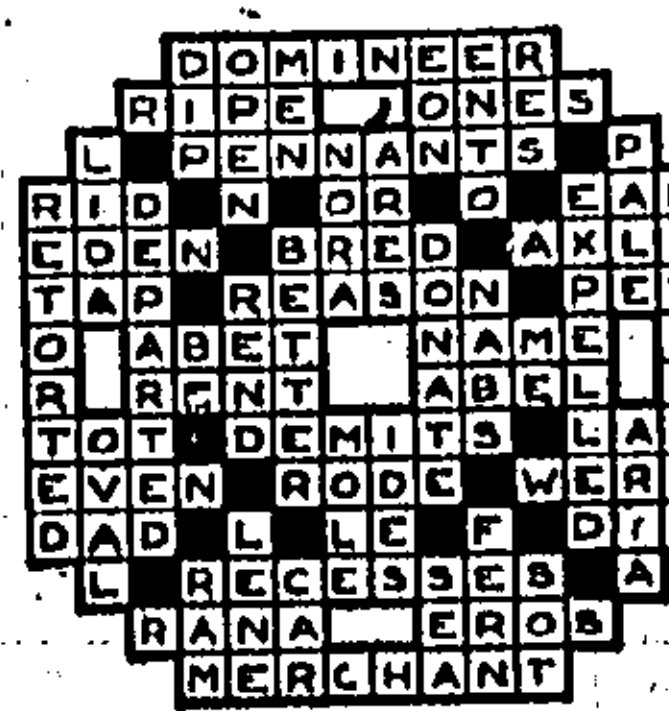

Komor's want to clear their entire stock by Saturday next if possible, and no reserves are made, as all the goods required for their contemplated world tour have already been placed aside and are being packed.

Several curios dealers who understood the value of the fine articles attended and bidding was fairly brisk between them, especially on old bronzes and wall-hanging scrolls. A lot of very fine wood carvings also went to them.

It is a great pity to see Komor's close, but "It's an ill wind," etc. Komor's losses are your gain. There will be three more auctions, at 5.15 p.m. to-morrow, Tuesday and Thursday next. These are great opportunities to pick up a few excellent bargains in curios and many wise people have bought several nice articles, to be stored until wanted for future presents.

Any article you wish to bid for can be chosen by yourself, and you need not wait for numbers as in ordinary auctions. Many make their choice the day before.

LAST WEEK'S SOLUTION

THE FANLING HUNT

Narrow Escape For Rider

HORSE FALLS OVER EMBANKMENT

THERE was no Meet last Sunday, as the Fanling Hunt and Race Club Meeting was being held. The previous day the Hunt went out to look for a fox, but had no sport.

There were about 40 present to meet the Master at Pott's Bungalow on Wednesday. These included Miss Alabaster, Mr. Amps, Mrs. Anderson, Flight-Lieut. Anderson, Major and Mrs. Annesley, Colonel Bird, Miss Bird, Mr. Bosanquet, Miss Carter, Mrs. Coltart, Mr. Davis, Miss Betty Fair, Mrs. Field, Mr. Garthwaite, Captain Gwydyr-Jones, Mrs. Joseph, Miss Lord, Mr. Marson, Mrs. McAvoy, Major Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Paton, Mr. Pritchard, Mrs. Rybot, Master Martin Seth-Smith, Miss Shenton, Mrs. St. Clair Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton, Captain Waller, Mrs. Wilson, Mr. Wood, Mr. Macnamara laid the trail for this hunt in place of Mr. Potts.

The hunt moved off down the lane in front of Pott's Bungalow and waited by the wood till hounds came running past. The hunt, bearing right-handed, skirted Kam Tsin village and crossed the small river that runs between the village and the golf links. After crossing the river hounds bore right-handed and skirting the links circled across the valley to finish on the side of the hill to the right of Saddle Pass.

Fairly Slow Run

It was a fairly slow run over some roughish country. Miss Bird had a spill, but managed to retain her horse. Miss Alabaster also appeared at one time to be in some slight trouble. Miss Lord had the misfortune to lose her pony at the check, from whence he made straight for home.

Hounds picked up the second trail on the track that runs along the base of that ridge. At the point where the path is running parallel to the River Beas, hounds went after a chow dog, who only managed to escape with his life by turning back towards the field where hounds were whipped off. After a slight delay hounds picked up the scent and went straight up over the hill at right angles to the path and down the other side — a very steep bit of going.

Here they picked up the track that runs towards the main road. Shortly before reaching the road the field divided in two on each side of a bog.

Narrow Escape

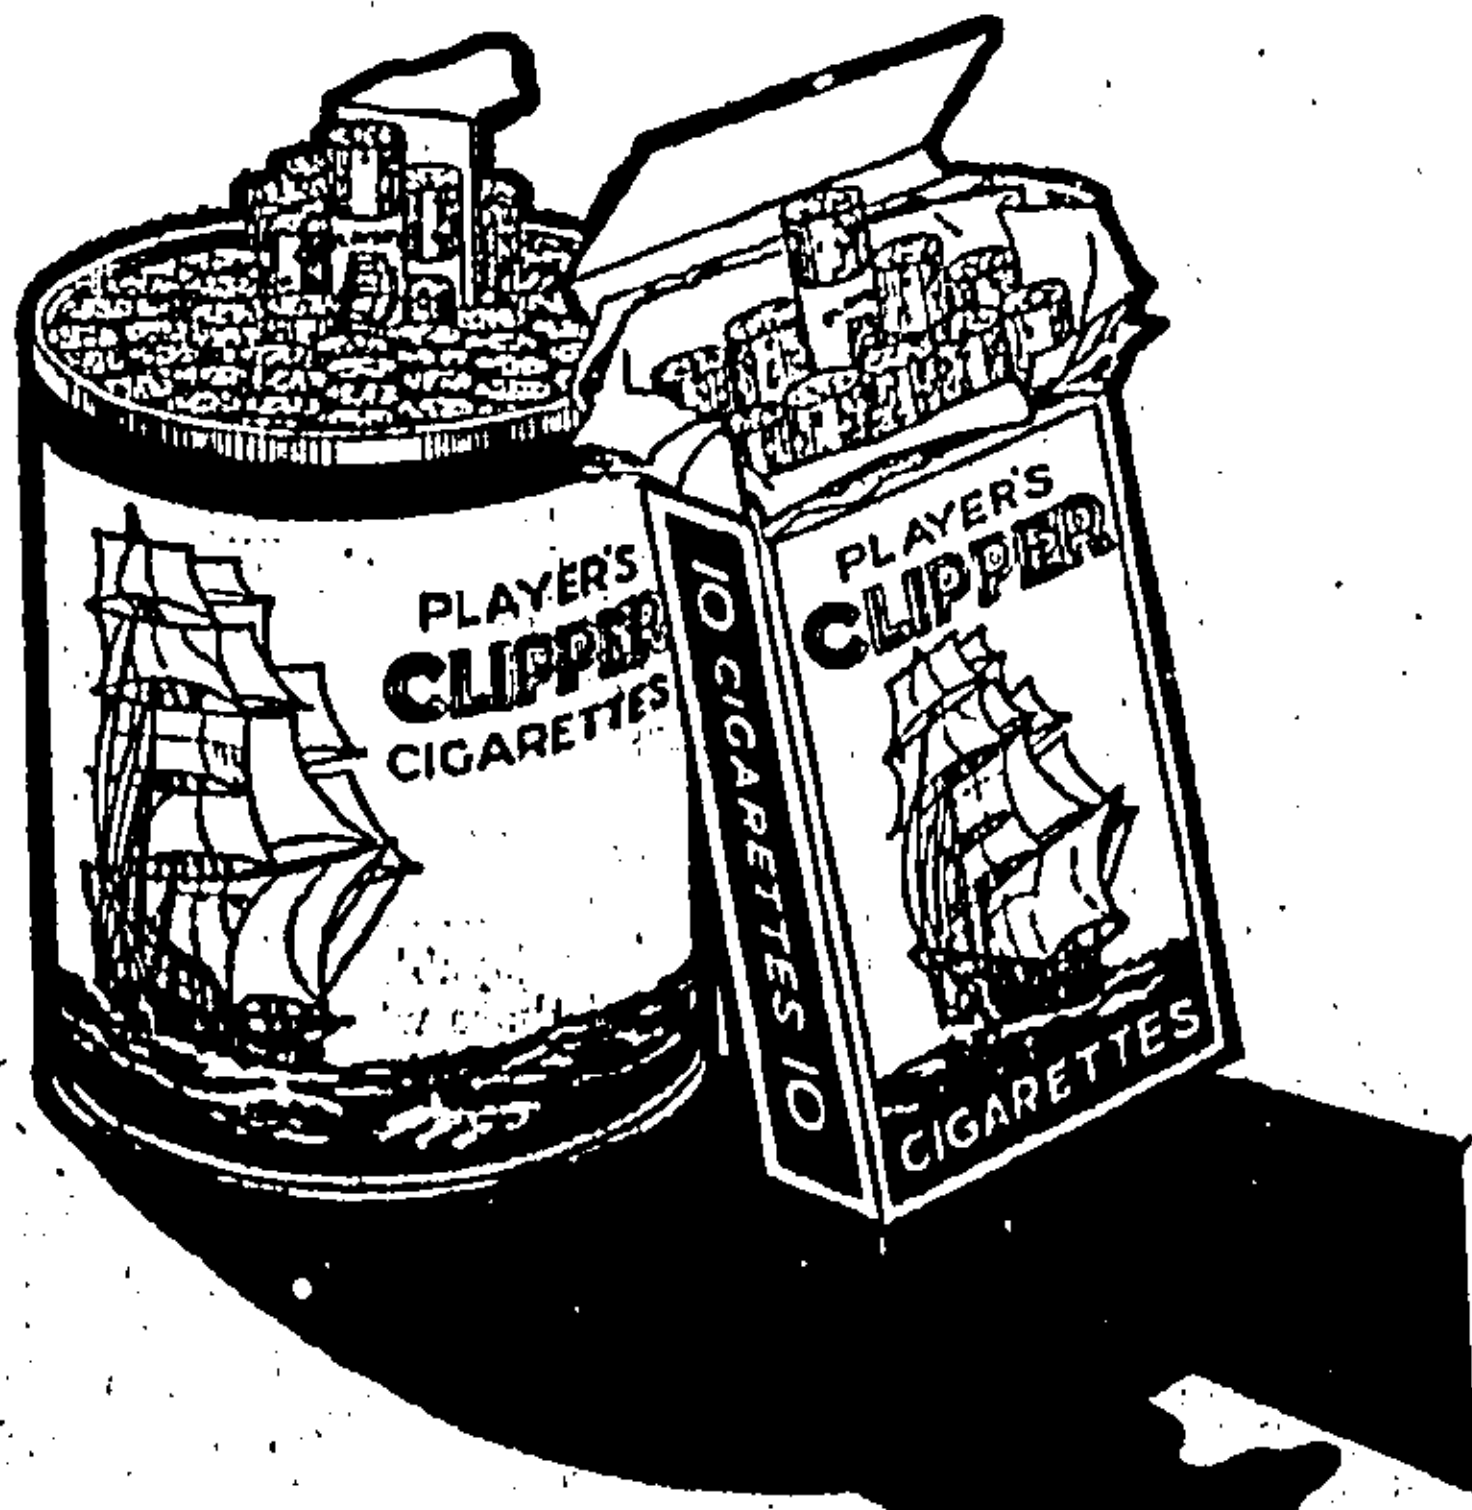

Here Mr. Bosanquet had what might have been a very nasty accident. In an endeavour to get across the bog to the side on which hounds were, he attempted to walk his horse over a very narrow cement ledge which forms a kind of dam or lock for the bog stream. Half way across the horse's back legs slipped over the edge, and horse and rider fell down a drop of about 15 feet. Mr. Bosanquet cut his face, but was very fortunate not to receive worse injuries. His horse, an Australian, appeared to be quite unhurt.

The hunt crossed the road and bore left-handed circling round to cross the road again. They then bore right-handed and re-crossed the road at exactly the same place as the first crossing to finish at Dill's Corner after a very rough and trappy line, which included a good deal of bog. There was some very bad riding over hounds during most of this line, which was run at a slow pace.

A CHARMING TRAVELLER

Miss Chong Returns To England

POPULAR MEMBER OF YOUNGER SET

THE younger set of the overseas Chinese community in the Colony temporarily lost one of their most popular members yesterday, when Miss Chong Lai-ying, 19-year-old daughter of Mr. Chong Chu, President of the Tong Wo Society of London, sailed for England by the s.s. Chitral. Miss Chong has only gone to visit her father, whom she has not seen for six years, and hopes to return to the Colony within a year.

Born in London, Miss Chong, more popularly known as "May", received her education at the Clare Park Ladies' School, Surrey, Annex of Alexander House, Broadstairs, and came to Hong Kong in 1929. She was a student at the St. Stephen's Girls' College up to the end of 1934, after which she took up Chinese

Tweeds Popular At Kwanti

NOT so big a crowd as one would have expected turned out for the Fanning Hunt and Race Club Meeting at Kwanti last Sunday, but there were some smart dresses to be seen all the same. It was a coldish, cloudy day and tweeds were popular. One of the smartest tweed ensembles was that worn by Mrs. Weldon, who has just arrived in the Colony. It was of an attractive dark green cloth flecked with red. A red wool jumper, red gauntlet gloves and brown suede shoes also touched with red picked out the red flecks. She wore one of those new "glen-garry"-shaped little hats of a dark green felt, with two feathers sticking up jauntily on one side.

Green is a fashionable colour this year, and a well-cut green check tweed costume was worn by Mrs. Dowling, with a plain green hat. Mrs. W. T. Stanton also favoured this colour, her skirt being check, topped with a plain coloured coat. Mrs. Brigham was there in a pin-stripe grey flannel coat and skirt with a smart black silk "jockey cap"

MR. ROSS ON HOLIDAY

It was cold enough for one or two fur coats to be seen. Mrs. Kayle was wearing an antelope coat over a navy check short coat with navy revers and a plain navy skirt and hat. Miss Yvonne Shenton was wearing a very nice-looking leopard coat over her riding clothes while waiting for the Ladies' event. Mrs. Livesey was also in a fur coat. Mrs. Clough-Taylor was in black with a very handsome silver fox fur collar. Mrs. Scott was in a scarlet two-piece with hat to match.

The C.B.A. gave a very much improved display yesterday and held the schoolgirls to a goalless first half.

FOUR GOALS TO ONE MARGIN

The Y.M.C.A. hockey team won a meritorious victory over a strong team from the H.K.S.R.A. in a friendly hockey game at King's Park yesterday by 4 goals to 1.

Moss gave an exceptionally good display in goal, while in front of him Selk and Tremlett were a safe pair of backs, the former being especially prominent with hard first-time clearances. In the intermediate line Bates, at centre-half, was outstanding.

The "Y" forward line led by Brown was very speedy, though they were at times inclined to hold on to the ball too long. The inside forwards combined well and

BRILLIANT PLAY AT U.S.R.C.

MRS. WILSON FAVOURED IN SINGLES EVENT

MRS. KAYLL AGAIN FAILS TO STRIKE BEST FORM

MISS Rosamund Hancock won her second Colony lawn tennis doubles title of the season when she and Mrs. N. Wilson beat Mrs. J. F. F. Kayll and Mrs. W. E. B. Dowling by 6-2, 9-7 in the Final of the Ladies' Open Championship at the U.S.R.C. yesterday.

The tennis provided was of an extraordinarily high standard and the winners thoroughly deserved their success. Mrs. Wilson's courtcraft being superb. Miss Hancock failed to reproduce the form she displayed against Mrs. Kayll on the previous day, but, nevertheless, brought off several outright winners on the forehand.

Mrs. Wilson gave a very purposeful display, seldom failing to push home an advantage that she had made possible by accurate placements. Her form yesterday leaves little doubt that she will be the 1936 singles champion—she will meet Miss Hancock in the Final next Saturday at the U.S.R.C.

Mrs. Kayll has lost touch at the worst possible moment. Yesterday she played brilliantly at the net only to fail in her ground shots.

It is of interest that she failed to win one of her six service games. Mrs. Dowling again exploited her powerful forehand drive to advantage. It was in perfect trim.

She, however, invariably failed at the critical periods of the sets. A good example of this was provided in the 14th game when she and Mrs. Kayll led 7-0 and 40-30 on her own service. In this game she served three double faults—one a foot fault—and her opponents levelled at 7-all and went on to win the match at 9-7. She was footfaulted on four occasions during the match. At the conclusion of the match Mrs. A. W. Bartholomew, presented the prizes, including those to L. Goldman and Major Withington, who played off the Men's Singles Final of the U.S.R.C. and which resulted in Goldman, the holder, winning a dull match at 6-0, 6-4.

Among the few spectators present was His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott.

Detailed scores by points of the Ladies' Doubles Final, giving the servers in correct order, were as follows:—

First Set
Mrs. Wilson	4-1	Mrs. Dowling	4-1
Mrs. Hancock	4-1	Mrs. Kayll	4-6
Mrs. Wilson	4-1	Mrs. Dowling	4-1
Mrs. Hancock	4-1	Mrs. Kayll	4-6
Second Set
Mrs. Wilson	4-1	Mrs. Dowling	7-5
Mrs. Hancock	4-1	Mrs. Kayll	4-0
Mrs. Wilson	4-1	Mrs. Dowling	4-1
Mrs. Hancock	4-1	Mrs. Kayll	4-0
Mrs. Wilson	4-1	Mrs. Dowling	4-1
Mrs. Hancock	4-1	Mrs. Kayll	4-0

The winners secured 82 points, as against their opponents' 65, securing an advantage of 10 points in the first set and of seven in the second.

TIGERS ACTIVE AGAIN

Pug-Marks Seen Near Ma On Shan

After a period of inactivity the tiger (or tigers) which were seen by several different parties in the New Territories recently, seem to have taken up their ramblings again and the latest report made to the Police in the New Territories was to the effect that pug marks had been seen on the foreshore of Ma On Shan last week.

This was followed by a thorough combing out of the district in the neighbourhood of Ma On Shan but, despite a constant vigil, no further traces of the beasts could be found.

LIGA PORTUGUESA CONCERT

Most Successful Evening

MUSIC AND DRAMATICS

The hall of the Club de Recreio was filled to overflowing last night at the second Charity concert organised by Liga Portuguesa, held under the patronage of the Portuguese Consul-General, Dr. Alvaro Brilhante Laborinho.

The numerous items were well rendered and received, and the many encores requested appreciably prolonged the programme.

The Moonlight Melodians under P. Simon and the orchestra of P. N. Sequeira and his sons contributed many selections during the evening. The singing of Mrs. Amalia B. Marques, both in her part as a maid-servant in one of the plays and her rendering of "The Blind Girl," as well as the monologue by Francisco Lobato Paria deserved special mention.

The two short plays kept the audience in waves of laughter and in the second one Lobato Paria rose to great heights as the foolish servant.

Judging by the satisfaction expressed at the concert last night the "schooling fund" of the Liga Portuguesa should benefit considerably, and as more funds are urgently needed it is hoped that those who have not sent in their donations yet will do so as soon as convenient.

AN UNLIKELY STORY

Widow's Queer Report To Police

ALLEGED DOUBLE MURDER IN HARBOUR

A report of a double murder and robbery in the harbour in the evening of February 1 was received by the Police on Friday night from Lam Shun Loi, a 78-year-old widow of the Wai Chau district. The Police, however, are placing little credence on the story and consider it highly improbable.

In her report on Friday the widow stated that she had lived for 47 years in Sarawak and had returned to China by steamer, the name of which she did not know, on February 1. The steamer was tied to a buoy in the harbour and at about 6 p.m. that afternoon she took a sampan and, with her luggage, was going to land on the island. In the sampan were two men, Wong Shun and Wong Chin, both of whom had travelled with her from Singapore.

Money Demanded
When in the harbour, another sampan came alongside and two men boarded her sampan and demanded money from her. As money was forthcoming one of the men struck her two fellow-passengers with a piece of wood and rendered them unconscious. They then changed into darker clothing and tied strips of iron, which were about a foot long and two inches thick, to each of the two men and threw them overboard.

The robbers then searched the luggage and took money and jewellery to the value of $8,200 from the three of them, and threw the baggage overboard.
She was landed on a wharf on the island, but does not know the name of it.

DRUNKEN FATHER'S LAST ACT

Tried To Incriminate His Daughter

Tunkhannock (Pennsylvania).—A drunken father whose last act was to incriminate his daughter by getting her fingerprints on a gun, committed suicide on his farm at Tunkhannock, Pennsylvania.

The daughter, Tessie Majovski, told the police that her father forced her at the point of a knife to point a rifle at him. "Hold it tight," he told her. "Put your fingerprints on it. They will find the prints and you will burn for this."

He had attached string to the trigger and intended discharging the gun himself.

Terrified, the girl held the string, but the shot went wide and the girl fled.

Later Majovski's body was found.

LONDON RUBBER MARKET

Conjectures Among Operators

RAISING OF EXPORT DUTY ON NATIVE PRODUCTION?

London, Yesterday.

Many Mining Lane operators confidently expect that the Netherlands Indies' export duty on native rubber will be increased in the course of the next few days. It is pointed out that now that the price has reached 7½d., native exports have once again been stimulated, despite the present 20 cent. duty, which was almost prohibitive at the price level of 6½d. ruling at the time of its imposition.

While it is admitted that the Netherlands appear to be proceeding at all speed with the registration of gardens, most circles feel that another excess of native exports is still possible before the successful conclusion of the operation.—Router.

THEY WENT TO THE OPERA

But The Tickets Were Faked

Munich.—Two Bavarian boys have been attending cinemas here for the last six months free of charge—with torn cinema tickets which they collected from friends and pasted together.

The boys, Anders Schaufend, aged 9, and Willy Thoma, aged 11, were so clever with scissors and paste that they were not caught till they tried the trick at the opera.

The collector there became suspicious when two small and not well-dressed boys presented tickets for the best seats in the house. He had them arrested.

Now the Munich City Court has let the boys off with a six months' suspended sentence—because "they did not understand the gravity of their offence."

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

Wong Sui-fuk, a Chinese male, aged 22, attempted to commit suicide last night at about 9 o'clock when he jumped overboard from the Yau-mat ferry "Man Chi", travelling from Hong Kong to Yunnan.

He was rescued by two seamen, Chan Chung and Loung Chi, from the ferry and taken to the hospital suffering from immersion.

Dundee awaits instructions from the Home Office.

RAILWAY ENTERPRISE SHOWS GOOD RESULTS

Canton, Yesterday.

After having adopted the plan of taking up the entire responsibility in transporting goods for its customers, the South Section of the Canton-Hankow Railway has now reaped good results. The income of the railway has shown a monthly increase of upwards of $100,000.—Central Press.

WHAMPOA DOCK DEVELOPMENT

PROPOSED RIVAL TO HONG KONG

ELABORATE SCHEME NOW BEING CONSIDERED

Nanking, Yesterday.

Active plans are now being considered by the Kwangtung authorities to develop the Whampoa Port into a deep-water harbour, to be eventually linked up with the Canton-Hankow Railway, which is expected to be completed very soon.

This was repeated by Mr. Lo Wen-kan, former Foreign Minister and now Member of the Whampoa Port Development Administration, who arrived here on Wednesday to approach the Central authorities for financial assistance in order to hasten the realisation of this ambitious project.

The construction work will be completed in four periods, in compliance with the scheme in hand, according to Mr. Lo. During the first and second periods, the surveying of the river course and building of a wharf to link up with the Canton-Hankow Railway will be taken up.

The dredging of the Pearl River bed at the mouth of the port and the erection of quays, transit sheds and godowns will be completed in the third and fourth periods.

OCEAN-GOING VESSELS

After the harbour is deepened, ocean-going vessels will be able to call at the port at will, instead of berthing at Hong Kong. Aside from its commercial significance, the harbour will provide a clearing point for goods destined for the outside world from the Canton-Hankow Railway and from Kwangtung and Kwangsi as well. The expenses are estimated at $4,100,000, and Mr. Lo is seeking financial assistance from the Ministries of Finance and the Railway. Bonds will also be issued soon, with the land at the port as security. After his pending interview with General Chiang Kai-shek, Mr. Lo will proceed to Shanghai to inspect the work of the Whampoa Conservancy, and later he will leave for Hankow with the Minister of the Railways for inspection of the Canton-Hankow Railway.—Central News Agency.

ELECTRICITY IN KWANGSI

Scheme Approved By Government

Canton, Yesterday.

The Kwangsi electric power plant has decided to erect a separate plant in Kweichow, an important city between Nanning and Luchow. The amount of money needed for the plant will be provided by the Kwangsi Provincial Bank. The Kwangsi Provincial Government has given approval to the entire scheme.—Central Press.

STOWAWAY MAKES A PUZZLE

Home Office Asked To Solve It

The Home Office has been set a puzzle by Dundee authorities, who want to know what they should do with a stowaway, believed to be Russian, who came from Hamburg, but who has no papers to prove his identity or nationality.

Albert Cla, aged 27, stowed away on board the steamer City of Flint, which left Dundee last month for Boston (Mass.). He must have originally boarded the vessel at Hamburg at the beginning of the week, when the vessel left for Dundee, via Leith.

His presence was undetected until after the steamer left Dundee. He was sent back by the pilot cutter and handed over to the police. All the stowaway had in his possession was a penknife and a cigarette holder. He speaks no English, but has a good knowledge of German.

Dundee awaits instructions from the Home Office.

LIFE-SAVING DRILL

Exercises Planned For Next Month

Canton, Yesterday.

The Red Cross Section of the Air Defence Commission will shortly carry out life-saving drill on a big scale in Tungchowang. The drill will take place on March 7 and 8. The nurses of the hospitals will also take part in the drill.—Central Press.

WORLD LABOUR CONDITIONS

British Government's Recommendations

WHITE PAPER PUBLISHED

London, Yesterday.

The Government has issued a White Paper announcing the decisions which it is communicating to the Secretary-General of the League of Nations regarding the various draft conventions or recommendations adopted by the International Labour Conference. The Government proposes to ratify the draft convention adopted at the 18th session of the conference in 1934, allowing the benefit of allowances to the involuntarily unemployed. Britain will also ratify the revised convention concerning workmen's compensation for occupational diseases.

The Government proposes to introduce legislation at a suitable opportunity to give effect to the recommendation of the 1929 conference concerning responsibility for the projection of power-driven machinery, and it is also hoped to develop the existing law and practice concerning the prevention of industrial accidents, to bring them into full accord with the recommendation on that subject of the 1929 conference.—British Wireless Service.

PREVENTION OF FLOODS

Conservancy Scheme Envisaged

Canton, Yesterday.

As floods have repeatedly been caused by the Pel-Kong River in the Ching Yuen District as a result of the rise of the Pel-kong River, the River Conservancy Commission is now drawing up plans for filling up the Pel-Kong River. It will probably cost $150,000 and will take some time before the project is achieved.—Central Press.

SALE OF LOCAL PRODUCTS

Factories Report Good Business

Canton, Yesterday.

According to reliable reports, the products of the Government-owned factories and mills have found ready markets everywhere in China. The sale of these products amount to $2,000,000 monthly.

As the demand is apparently greater than the supply, the Provincial Government is now taking steps to expand the factories.—Central Press.

CONSOLIDATE—a useful word as valuable to the naturalist as to the soldier; check your records, an essential for the business man and axiomatic for the scientist. Two of us re-visited the Ping Shan area (Ping Shan north to the Mong Tseng peninsula) eight days after my previous visit. We walked for six and a half hours, with a brief stop for lunch; so brief was the mid-day halt that my friend lodged a complaint! Before lunch we had identified 40 species of birds and before we returned to the car at Ping Shan we had taken the list to 62 named species. Not as many as the week before, but we were not for part of the time in a boat.
It was interesting that though the majority of the species were the same, yet some seen the previous week were not again seen, and vice versa. For example, on January 25 we saw, of birds of prey, Kite, Buzzard, and Peregrine; on this occasion a Kite and a pair of Marsh Harriers.

A redstart puzzled us; we wrote down a full description and it tallied exactly with that of the female Daurian Redstart. The male of this species, black, pearly grey and chestnut-red, is so conspicuous that we tend to forget that he is married and, though it is true that he deserts his more sombre spouse in the winter, yet she is probably hopping about in the distance listening for the spring awakening of marital affection.

NEW RECORDS CONFIRMED

One new record made on January 18 in the Shum Chun Valley was confirmed, for we saw and inspected at close range a small flock of three or four of the jolly little Chinese Yellow-bellied Wren Warblers.

The new record of January 25 was confirmed. On that day we had identified a single female Blue-tailed Robin; on this walk we saw no fewer than five of these birds, one of which was probably a male. But we more than checked our Blue-tail record: we consolidated our position in respect to the winter migration of Robins. On January 15 we saw a Blue-throat at Mal Po; another was seen by a friend a few days later. On this walk we failed to see a Blue-throat, but we made up for it by seeing two Rubythroats.

A FEW SPECIES

The only resident Robin is the Magpie Robin or Dayal Bird, a familiar black-and-white small thrush-like bird. Until a month ago we knew of no Robins which visited the Territories in the winter. There are only four possibles, namely (1) Japanese Robin, Erithacus akahito (the English Robin is E. rubecula), a species of which there are no records in the district; (2) the En-tarn Red-spotted Blue-throat, Cyanosylvia sinica robusta; (Vaughan and Jones say a winter visitor to Kwangtung which haunts marshes); (3) The Siberian Blue-tail or Eastern Blue-tailed Robin, Lanthia cyanura, (I can find no records of this species from Kwangtung, though La Touche says, China south of Yangtze, winter); (4) The Rubythroat, Calliope calliope: never previously recorded from British Territories (Vaughan and Jones say, rare winter visitor to Kong Mun, a favourite cage bird).

Two birds were seen in districts a mile or two apart; the first was seen for a short time only by my friend, the second was examined closely through glasses by both of us; the identification was certain. The bird is an olive brown Robin with a bright ruby-red throat, the patch bordered with black; a prominent white moustache-like patch and a prominent white streak over the eye, which is surrounded with black. The female has a white throat and both malar and superciliary stripes are indistinct. Our two were both males. We must on a future walk look out for the female Ruby-throat. The Japanese Robin has, according to La Touche, only been recorded from three parts of China, including Fukien, winter; Caldwell says, north western Fukien, December, seen several times about Xing-fu. Our chances of seeing this, the last of the Robins, in the New Territories are negligible, but any and in daily peril, yet managing occasional visit to his home.

During one of his absences his home is burnt and his wife contracts a fatal illness from exposure when hiding in the woods.
He returns only in time to bury her and, just as he is planning to place his little daughter in safety, he is captured and condemned to death, from which he is saved by his little girl, who, in company with a faithful slave, makes a personal appeal to President Lincoln and wins his heart as she has won all others, of friends and enemies alike.

Excellent Support

The supporting cast is all that can be desired; John Boles as Captain Carey, Shirley's father,
Jack Holt as Colonel Morrison, a Northern officer, capturer of Captain Carey and in turn captivated by little Shirley, and Karen Morley as Mrs. Carey, all give notable characterisations. And, last, but not least, is Bill Robinson as Uncle Billy, the faithful slave. His dance with Shirley is a thing to be remembered. But the star round whom these satellites revolve is the greater part of the picture—Shirley Temple, more bewitching and more fascinating than ever.—H.S.W.

It is a good winter for thrushes and Robins and we may be fortunate.

GREBES
In the open sea to the west of the Mong Tseng peninsula we saw four Great-crested Grebes together on the placid surface of the water. One dived, the second, third and fourth followed;
all had disappeared—then up they bobbed again like corks. We wondered what games of follow-my-leader or leap-frog they had played below the surface of the water.
Three little birds were seen on the shore (it was high tide), two were so tame that they allowed my friend to make a pencil sketch.
The I thought they were Sanderling,
but he thinks Chinese Kentish Plover; we must make certain on our next visit. A Common Sandpiper and a Red-bellied Rock Thrush completed the shore birds seen. Later, inland, on the surface of a fish-pond, we saw three Little Grebes together and two other birds, possibly of the same species were also seen—a good Grebe day.
A large flock of Crested Buntings was observed and during the day at least half a dozen Eastern Grey Herons. No Pelicans, however!

FOUR TREASURES OF THE LIBRARY

"PRECIOUS THINGS" OF THE WRITING ART

TOOLS TRAINED BY THE MASTER'S HAND

(By PHYLLIS JUBY)

BRUSH, Ink, Ink-stone and Paper, indispensable to the Chinese scholar or painter, are known as the "Four Treasures" or "Precious Things" of the Library.
Their importance is great, for, in China, the relationship between the artist and his instruments is a close one. To write, in China, is to create. Each stroke of the character is elegant and delicately balanced. The writer must trace with a brush that, through the long years of cultivation and study, has learnt to obey; his mind, wrist, fingers and brush must move in perfect harmony. So it is that in China each scholar or painter possesses his own brushes which he trains to his own way.

There were long, soft, sheep's hair brushes, sleek rabbit hair brushes, neither too pliant nor too stiff; wolf, deer, fox—all were tried until the making of brushes became in itself an art.

Maturing The Ink
It is the well-loved pines from Chinese mountains that go to make the ink. This second precious thing is as much an object of care as the brushes. It is solid and scented. Formed into oblong cakes or cylinders, it is inscribed with the maker's name. Sometimes the ink is made into various sizes and shapes both elegant and ingenious. It may be heavily ornamented with carving. There is a story told of one Chou Liyuan who amassed ten thousand specimens of ink-sticks. So deep was his love and veneration for his collection that at each New Year he would get them out, drink wine to them and then kneel down to worship them.

Brush-making Art
The Chinese brush must be soft and elastic; those skilled in its use can discern the slightest differences. Hairs are laid in a regular manner and brought to a delicate tip, calling for neat fingers and great skill in the making.
The thickness, of course, varies according to the type of writing or painting for which the brush is to be used.

Ming T'ien of the Ch'in dynasty is thought to be the first to make a painting brush, but there is a story about the Duke of Chou painting a tortoise with a brush, and Confucius, too, is credited with having one. In earlier times painting was done with a reed pen dipped in black lacquer. It was at the time of the Han dynasty that brushes were first produced in great quantities. At that time, too, scholars called for increased delicacy and excellence of workmanship, for the art of calligraphy had become highly popular. A great literary revival had com-

Ireland were playing for the

the bandage was torn off and he retired once again bleeding profor a third time with a special bandage and scrum-cap, but was off for good not long after.

STUDENTS ALL QUIET

Spring-Term Reopens
At University

CANTON REMAINS CALM

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday.
All wild talk about fighting the Japanese and other patriotic outbursts by undergraduates of Sun Yat-sen University are over, as the Spring term begins to-day.
About 600 students have registered for re-admission, and 1,400 more will be registered to-day.

Classroom work is likely to begin on Monday, although several days will elapse before all the students return to their studies.

Five weeks were spent in propaganda tours around the province. However, some students merely went home and spent the Chinese New Year with their relatives. They failed to arouse the students in the county schools, which suspended classes before the arrival of the University undergraduates.

Some student leaders were stirred by politicians and several professors, who wanted to control the University. Chancellor Chou Lou then sent in his resignation to make room for the ambitious politicians, but his resignation was rejected owing to his good work for the University and his increasing political influence.

Mr. Chou takes the position that

WOLFRAM ORE IN CANTON

FOREIGN SALES
BOOMING

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday.
Owing to the preparations for war in Europe and elsewhere, the price of local wolfram and tungsten has increased to $80 Hong Kong currency a picul. This mineral is sold by the First Group Army to agents in Hong Kong for foreign armament firms.

The sale of these ores is said to be brisk because of their use for making tungsten steel.

The price of wolfram ranged around H.K.$60 a picul during the past few months. Owing to the good demand, it may rise to $90 a picul (133-1/3 lbs.). Wolfram is sold as a military monopoly, private sale and transportation rendering the goods subject to confiscation.

Mining companies secure the ores from the mines in Northern Kwangtung and Southern Kwangsi and sell it to the sales office of the First Group Army at about 20 or 30 per cent. below the market price.

It is said that Kwangtung is turning out 20,000,000 tons of wolfram a year. Local prices are lower than those in Burma or elsewhere, it is reported.
